ROMAN COINS.

TREBONIANUS GALLUS.

[Caius Vibius Trebonianus Gallus, was born at Meninx, an island on the coast of Africa, about the year of Rome 960 (A. D. 207). He was General of the Roman army under Trajan Decius, whom he caused to be assassinated, when the soldiers proclaimed him emperor, in 1004 (A. D. 251). Gallus was murdered by his soldiers at Interamna in Umbria, when about to march from that city to suppress the revolt of the army in Maesia, which had proclaimed Aemilian emperor, in the year of Rome 1007 (A. D. 254)].

AEMILIANUS.

[Marcus (or Caius) Julius Aemilius Aemilianus was born in Mauretania, of obscure parents, about the year of Rome 961 (A. D. 208). This usurper was governor of Maesia and Pannonia under Trebonianus, and was proclaimed emperor by the legions of those provinces in 1006 (A. D. 253). He was murdered by his troops near Spoletta in Umbria, when about to contest the empire with Valerian, who had been elected by the legions of Rhetia and Noricum, in the year of Rome 1007 (A. D. 254)].

These types are equally rare; but query if they be really third brass?

CORNELIA SUPERA.

[Caia (or Cnea) Cornelia Supera, the wife of Aemilianus, is known only by her coins. Some authors have supposed this lady to have been the wife of the younger Valerian, while others have assigned her to Trebonianus. Eckhel, however, has proved that she was the wife of Aemilianus. As to the prenomen, most writers agree that the C. which occurs on her Latin coins, and the Γ. which is generally found on those bearing Greek legends, signifies Caia: indeed some of the latter bear the letters ΓΑΙ. Vaillant and Sestini have each published a coin of Supera, with the letters ΓΝ. which in all probability signifies Cnea].

- These are valued by Mionnet at seventy-two francs each.

VALERIANUS.

[Publius Licinius Valerianus was born of an illustrious family, in the year of Rome 943 (A. D. 190). Having been directed by Trebonianus to march against Aemilianus, he was saluted emperor by the army he commanded. The deaths of Aemilianus and Trebonianus secured to him the possession of the empire in 1007 (A. D. 254). Valerian was taken prisoner by the Persians in 1013 (A. D. 260), by whom he was most barbarously treated. He died, as is supposed, about three years afterwards].

MARINIANA.

[This lady, the supposed wife of Valerianus, is known only by her coins, from the types of which, it is supposed that she died in the beginning of the reign of Valerianus, and that she was consecrated. Vaillant and Beauvais say, that she was taken prisoner with Valerianus, and that she died in captivity, but without any authority: indeed this is disproved by her coins struck at Viminacium, a city of Mæsia. On these coins she is styled DIVA. MARINIANA, as on those struck at Rome, and they bear the date xv., that of the city, which corresponds with the 1007th year of Rome. Mionnet remarks, that it is not certain that Mariniana was the wife of Valerianus: the coins described below may belong to his mother, his daughter, or his sister. The discovery of some colonial coin may perhaps, at a future time, decide this question].

GALLIENUS.

[Publius Licinius Gallienus, the son of the emperor Valerianus, was born in the year of Rome 971 (A. D. 218), and associated in the empire with his father, with the titles of Caesar and Augustus, in 1006 (A. D. 253). After the capture of Valerian by the Persians, he reigned alone until the year 1021 (A. D. 268), when he was murdered by his officers near Milan, whither he had gone to quell the insurrection under Aureolus, the commander of his cavalry].

In gold, No. 123 is by far the rarest. The next in rarity are Nos. 96, 117, and 119; then Nos. 2, 12, 15, 20, 24, 25, 27, 30, 37, 84, 112, 148, 149, and 155. Nos. 4, 28, 33 to 35, 40, 45, 46, 48, 80, 88, 91, 102, 111, 115, 121, 122, 124, 130, 132, 135 to 137, 139, 145, 146, 150, and 151, are the least rare. In silver, Nos. 38 and 76 are extremely rare. Nos. 1, 98, 113, and 149, are next in rarity. Nos. 5, 16, 18, 19, 39, 44, 56, 61, 65, 72, 73, 85, 87, 93, 94, 118, 120, 125, 126, 132, 134, 143, and 144, are much rarer than the remaining numbers.

[COINS IN BILLON, RESTORED BY GALLIENUS].

AUGUSTUS.

1.

DIVO. AVGVSTO. Head of Augustus, with radiated crown.—Rev.
CONSECRATIO. An eagle with expanded wings.

2.

Same legends. An altar with the fire kindled.

3.

DIVO. AVGVSTO. The head of Augustus, with radiated crown.—
Rev. IVNONI. MARTIALI. A statue of Juno, within a temple.
No. 3 is extremely rare, and valued by Mionnet at 100 francs.

VESPASIANUS.

DIVO. VESPASIANO. Head of Vespasian, with radiated crown.—
Rev. CONSECRATIO. An eagle; or an altar, as above.

TITUS.

DIVO. TITO. Head of Titus, with radiated crown.—Rev. CONSE-
CRATIO. An eagle; or an altar.

NERVA.

DIVO. NERVAE. The same types as the preceding.

These are rather more rare than those of Vespasian and Titus.

TRAJANUS.

DIVO. TRAIANO. Head of Trajan, with radiated crown.—Rev. CON-
SECRATIO. An eagle; or an altar, with the fire kindled.

2.

IMP. TRAIANO. PIO. FEL. AVG. P. P. Head of Trajan.—Rev.
 VIA. TRAIANO. A woman seated on the ground, leaning on a wheel, and holding a whip.

This coin, supposed unique, is at present in the cabinet of Mons. Gosselin of Paris. It was originally in the collection of d'Ennery and in his catalogue is stated to be of a fabric similar to those of the time of Trajanus Decius or Gallienus. Mionnet, however, is of opinion that it belongs to an earlier reign than Gallienus, the fabric being superior to the other coins supposed to have been restored by that emperor, here described.

HADRIANUS.

DIVO. HADRIANO. Head of Hadrianus, with radiated crown.—Rev.
 CONSECRATIO. An eagle; or an altar, with the fire kindled.

ANTONINUS PIUS.

DIVO. PIO. Head of Antoninus Pius, with radiated crown.—Rev.
 CONSECRATIO. An eagle; or an altar, with the fire kindled.

MARCUS AURELIUS. 1.

DIVO. MARCO. Head of Marcus Aurelius, with radiated crown.—
Rev. CONSECRATIO. An eagle; or an altar, with the fire kindled.

2.

DIVO. MARCO. ANTONINO.—Rev. CONSECRATIO. Same types.
 The coins with this last legend are much rarer than those with DIVO.
 MARCO. only.

COMMODUS.

DIVO. COMMODO. Head of Commodus, with radiated crown.—Rev.
 CONSECRATIO. An eagle; or an altar, with the fire kindled.

SEPTIMIUS SEVERUS.

DIVO. SEVERO. Head of Severus, with radiated crown.—Rev.
 CONSECRATIO. An eagle; or an altar, with the fire kindled.

SEVERUS ALEXANDER.

DIVO. ALEXANDRO. Head of Severus Alexander, with radiated crown.—Rev. CONSECRATIO. An altar, with the fire kindled; or an eagle.

It appears, by Eckhel, that the coins hitherto assigned to Valerian junior, in reality belong to this prince. This author shews that Valerian the younger never had the titles of Caesar and Augustus conferred upon him, and, consequently, that no coins were struck in his honour.

With regard to the titles on the coins of Saloninus, Eckhel is of opinion that the reason why some of them, struck during the lifetime of this prince, bear the style of Augustus, although those struck after his death, bear that of Caesar only, is as follows:—When Gallienus quitted Gaul, and passed into Pannonia, to quell the revolt in that country, he invested Saloninus with the title of Emperor, with a view to give more authority to the young prince; and it is probable that the moneyers of Rome and the provinces, considered that this title comprised also that of Augustus, both being generally borne together. That the title of Emperor was conferred upon Saloninus, is proved by several ancient monuments cited by Eckhel, in which it is coupled with that of Caesar, or Nobilissimus Caesar.

JULIUS GALLIENUS.

[Quintus Julius Gallienus, son of Gallienus and Salonina, was declared Caesar by his father after the death of his brother, in the year of Rome 1012 (A. D. 259). The time of his death is not known. Historians have spoken of him but slightly, and Zonaras is the only one who mentions his death. This writer says that he was put to death, together with his uncle Valerian the younger, by order of the senate; while Pollio and Eutropius say that the younger Valerian perished with his brother, the emperor Gallienus, at the siege of Milan].

The coins attributed to this prince are uncertain. If they may be considered authentic, Julius Gallienus died before his father, who had him placed among the gods.

VALERIANUS THE YOUNGER.

[Valerianus, the son, as is supposed, of Valerian the elder and his wife Mariniana, was, according to the authors above mentioned, assassinated at the siege of Milan in the year of Rome 1021 (A. D. 268)].

LICINIA GALLIENA.

[Licina Galliëna is supposed to have been the cousin of the emperor].

The coins of the emperor Gallienus with the legend GALLIENAE. AVGVSTAE. were attributed by Goltzius to this lady, but Eckhel restores them to the emperor. No others are known.

POSTUMUS.

[Marcus Cassianus Latinus Postumus, was born in Gaul, of an obscure family. He was governor of that country under Valerian, when he assumed the purple, in the year of Rome 1011 (A. D. 258). Postumus and his son were murdered by their soldiers after the taking of Mancey, in which the usurper Lollian, or Lælian, had sought refuge].

IMP. C. POSTVMVS. P. F. AVG. The laureated head of Postumus to the right.—Rev. INVICTO. AVG. Bust of Postumus, the younger (?) to the left, with radiated crown and a sceptre, or baton, resting on the shoulder.

The only historian who makes mention of Postumus the younger is Trebellius Pollio, an author considered by some as of doubtful authority. Eckhel is of opinion that no such person existed as Postumus the younger. Banduri has assigned several coins to this supposed prince, but they have long since been restored to the elder Postumus. The type described above is thought by M. Mionnet to belong to the son; but although the experience of this indefatigable numismatist merits attention, it must nevertheless be allowed that the supposed youth of the bust on the reverse is but a slight authority for such an hypothesis. Mionnet, in speaking of this coin, says, “La tête du revers est sensiblement plus jeune que celle qui est de l’autre côté; ce ne peut donc être celle d’une divinité, telle qu’Hercule ou Mars; ce n’est point non plus celle de Victorin que Postume prit pour collègue; car Victorin étoit un général consommé lorsqu’il fut associé à Postume, et devoit être d’un âge peu différent de celui de ce denier: ce ne peut donc être que la tête du fils de Postume.” That the bust in question is not that of Victorinus, no one the least acquainted with the portraits of that usurper will deny. The nose of Victorinus is, on all his coins, decidedly aquiline; but that of Postumus is always of a different form. With respect to the supposed youth of the bust, M. Prosper Dupré* very justly observes that this might not have been intentional, but merely owing to the smallness of the object upon which the engraver had to exercise his skill. This writer remarks that many persons consider the length and size of the beard as furnishing a distinction between the Emperor and the Caesar; whilst the absurdity of these opinions is shewn by the coins of some emperors, Macrinus especially, upon which the bust appears sometimes with a very ample, and at others with a short, curled beard. A perusal of the very ingenious and learned tract of M. Dupré, will satisfy the reader that there are very slight grounds for M. Mionnet’s attribution.

LAELIANUS.

[Ulpus Cornelius Laelianus, an usurper in the reign of Gallienus, was killed by his troops at the instigation of Victorinus].

STYLE:—IMP. C. VLP. COR. LAELIANVS.—IMP. C. LAELIANVS. P. F. AVG.

The names of Laelianus, Lollianus, and Aelianus, are used indiscriminately by historians, who appear to apply them to the same personage; namely, the usurper who assumed the purple in Gaul, during the reign of Postumus, in that country; but, according to some coins, upon which the prenomens is different, the above names belong to three different persons. The coins of Laelianus are fully authenticated. Those of Lollianus are given by Tanini as existing in the cabinet of the Prince de Waldeck; and Eckhel has expressed his belief in their authenticity, as well as in those of Aelianus, published in the Museum Theupoli. Those published by Goltzius and Chifflet are spurious.

LOLLIANUS.

The coins assigned to this usurper, in the reign of Gallienus, are doubted. Tanini thus describes a coin in third brass:—

IMP. C. LOLLIANVS. P. F. AVG. Head of Lollianus.—Rev. ARA.

PACIS. The temple of Janus, shut; before it, an altar, with the fire kindled.

AELIANUS.

A coin of this usurper is described in the Museum Theupoli thus:—

THIRD BRASS.

IMP. C. Q. VALENS. AELIANUS. P. AVG. Head of Aelianus.
—Rev. IOVI. CONSER. AVGG. Jupiter standing, holding the hasta and thunderbolt: in the exergue, S. M. I.

The authenticity of this coin is doubted; but Eckhel bears testimony to the general accuracy of the coins described in the collection above mentioned. The letters in the exergue create a doubt as to the time of this usurper's revolt; and it has been by some supposed that he is the same personage who is styled by Eutropius, Aemilianus, and who usurped the purple in Gaul in the reign of Diocletian, in whose reign the practice of placing letters in the exergue became common.

VICTORINUS THE ELDER.

[Marcus Piauvonius Victorinus, General of the legions under Postumus, was associated with that usurper in the government of Gaul, about the year of Rome 1018 (A. D. 265). Victorinus was murdered by his soldiers at Cologne in 1020 (A. D. 267)].

VICTORINUS THE YOUNGER.

[The younger Victorinus was created Caesar by his father when dying, and shortly after, fell by the hands of the soldiers who had assassinated that usurper. The coins hitherto given to this prince, belong to the elder Victorinus, as is shewn by Eckhel].

VICTORINA.

[Victorina, or Victoria, the mother of the elder Victorinus, was styled by the legions of Gaul, AVGVSTA. and MATER. CASTRORVM. (Mother of Armies). Through the influence of this celebrated woman, Victorinus was associated with Postumus. Marius and Tetricus successively owed their election to her. She died some months after the elevation of the latter, not without suspicion of having been poisoned by his order, in the year of Rome 1021 (A. D. 268). Some authors say positively that she died a natural death].

MARIUS.

[Marcus Aurelius Marius, an usurper in the reign of Gallienus, was a man of obscure origin. The legions of Gaul proclaimed him emperor, after the death of Victorinus, in the year of Rome 1020 (A. D. 267). History says that he was assassinated three days after his election, but Eckhel is of opinion that his reign was not so short, and that it probably extended to one or two months].

TETRICUS THE ELDER.

[Caius Pesuvius Tetricus, an usurper in the reign of Gallienus, descended from a senatorial family, was governor of Aquitaine under the emperors Valerian and Gallienus. The legions of Gaul elected him emperor in the year of Rome 1020 (A. D. 267), just previous to the death of Gallienus. Tetricus held the sovereignty he had seized, during the whole of the reign of Claudius Gothicus, and part of that of his successor Aurelian, when he voluntarily gave up the provinces to that emperor, and retired to private life, in the year of Rome 1025 (A. D. 272). The time of his death is not known.]

The sixth legend is remarkable for the repetition of the title CAESAR. This also occurs on the coins of Carinus and Numerianus. The last three legends are found on coins of this prince in the cabinet of the French king. One of these is in gold; the others in third brass. The coins with the legends TETRICVS. AVG., and C. PIV. TETRICVS. A. are in third brass, and have been published by Banduri and Eckhel, both of whom have offered their comments on the title of Augustus given to Tetricus the younger. Treb. Pollio and Victor speak of this prince as Caesar only, and never style him Augustus; but Banduri maintains that he bore this title; while Eckhel is of a contrary opinion, and supposes that the legend in question is an error, found only on the brass coins of this prince, the striking of which was confided to illiterate moneyers. Since this learned antiquary wrote, a gold coin of Tetricus with the title of Augustus has been published by M. Mionnet, who nevertheless thinks it probable that the engraver of the dye has by mistake put AVG. instead of CAES. and considers the question as still undecided.

CYRIADES.

[The writer in the Augustan history says, that Cyriades caused himself to be proclaimed emperor in the East, in the year of Rome 1010 (A. D. 257), and was killed by his own soldiers upon the news of the approach of Valerianus: Gibbon, however, supposes that this is an error, and that Cyriades was probably set up by Sapor, after the capture of Valerian. See chap. x.]

Goltzius and others have published coins of Cyriades, but they are not authenticated.

MACRIANUS THE ELDER.

[Another usurper during the distracted reign of Gallienus. He was defeated by Aureolus, in Illyria, and shortly after murdered by his own soldiers, in the year of Rome 1015 (A. D. 262)].

The coins quoted by Beauvais in his history belong to the younger Macrianus.

MACRIANUS THE YOUNGER.

[Marcus (or Titus) Fulvius Macrianus was declared Augustus at the same time as his father, by the legions of the East, in the year of Rome 1013 (A. D. 260). He shared the fate of his parent, after their defeat by Aureolus].

STYLE:—MACRIANVS. NOBIL. CAES.—IMP. C. FVL. MACRIANVS. P. F. AVG.

It would appear from the first of these titles, that, contrary to the testimony of historians, Macrianus the younger was first declared Caesar, and that that of Augustus was conferred upon him subsequently. The Latin coins of the younger Macrianus do not bear the prenom.

His Greek coins differ in the name: some have MARCVS, others TITVS. If any of the coins with these names bore an old head, instead of the youthful portrait always found on them, it might reasonably be supposed that either Titus or Marcus belonged to the elder Macrianus. Nevertheless, it is certain that many of the imperial Greek coins have portraits but little resembling those on the Latin coins of the same emperors. Sestini has published a Greek coin,* which if authentic, might solve this question; but its genuineness is doubted.

[Caius Fulvius Quietus, another son of Macrianus the elder, was invested with the title of Augustus at the same time as his father and brother, in the year of Rome 1013 (A. D. 260). These having been destroyed, Quietus sought refuge in Emesa; but Odenathus, prince of Palmyra, having taken that city, he was put to death, in the year of Rome 1015 (A. D. 262)].

No authentic coins.

REGALIANUS.

[Regalianus was a Dacian, and general of the army of Gallienus in Illyria, in the year of Rome 1014. He defeated the legions who had proclaimed Ingenuus, and was in his turn saluted emperor by the army of Mœsia; but he died, as is supposed, by the hands of those who had raised him to the empire].

The coins of this usurper, if really antique, are of the first rarity; beside the types described below, there is another quoted by Mionnet. It is in the cabinet of Vienna, and appears to have been struck on a coin of Caracalla. The obverse bears the legend, C. P. C. REGALIANV-TORI. with the radiated head of Regalianus: on the reverse, CON. ANTONINVS. PIV. A woman standing, and the remains of the laureated head of Caracalla. The coin originally bore on the obverse, ANTONINVS. PIVS. AVG. BRIT.—and on the reverse, MARTI. PACATORI.

DRYANTILLA.

[Sulpicia Dryantilla, the supposed wife of Regalianus, is not mentioned by any Historian. She is assigned by Eckhel to this usurper. (Tom.

vii, p. 463). The same author cites two types struck on coins of an earlier date. One has SA. AVG. YANTILLA.—reverse, PUVNONI. REDIN. The other bears PIETASTNIL—reverse, IVLIAN. IREDIN. The first of these was originally a Julia Maesa; and the other, one of the Julias, with PIETAS. on the reverse].

STYLE:—SVLP. DRYANTILLA. AVG.

The coins of this lady are not authenticated (see the preceding note). I have seen a modern forgery, among a parcel of common antique coins recently brought from Alexandria.

VALENS.

[Valens was proconsul of Achaia, under Gallienus. He assumed the purple upon hearing that Macrianus sought his life, but was killed by his own soldiers at the end of six months, a few days after the murder of Piso, in the year of Rome 1014 (A. D. 261)].

No authentic coins.

PISO FRUGI.

[Piso Frugi was a senator, and descended from the illustrious family of the Pisos. He attended Valerian in his war against the Persians, and subsequently entered into the service of Macrianus, who sent him against Valens. Piso failed in his mission, and, passing into Thessaly, assumed the purple. He was shortly after assassinated, by order of Valens].

No coins.

A. AEMILIANUS.

[Alexander Aemilianus was praefect of Egypt in the reigns of Valerian and Gallienus, and caused himself to be nominated emperor by the troops under his command, about the year of Rome 1015. He was soon defeated and captured; and, being sent prisoner to Gallienus, was strangled in his dungeon].

No authentic coins.

SATURNINUS I.

[A general under Valerian and Gallienus; killed by the same soldiers who had invested him with the purple].

No authentic coins.

TREBELLIANUS.

[Trebellianus was a famous pirate, who assumed the purple in Isauria. He perished in a battle with the army sent out against him by Gallienus. No coins known].

CELSUS.

[Celsus cultivated a farm in Africa, and was, against his wish, elected emperor about the year of Rome 1018. He was killed, after a reign of seven days, by Galliena, a cousin of Gallienus the emperor].

The authenticity of the coins published by Goltzius and others is doubted.

AUREOLUS.

[Marcus Acilius Aureolus was born of an obscure family in Dacia. He was governor of Illyria, under Gallienus, and, after quelling the revolt of the Macriani, he caused himself to be proclaimed emperor, in the year of Rome 1020 (A. D. 267). Gallienus defeated him near Milan, and Aureolus fled to that city for refuge. Milan was invested, but during the siege Gallienus was assassinated. Aureolus surrendered himself in the following year to Claudius Gothicus, whose soldiers immediately put him to death].

S. ANTONINUS.

[Sulpicius Antoninus is supposed by Zosimus to have assumed the purple about the same time as Aureolus, and to have met the usual fate of the usurpers of that period; but a date on one of the coins quoted below indicates that it was in the year of Rome 1006 (A. D. 253), at the commencement of the reign of Valerian. The scene of the revolt of Antoninus appears from these coins to have been Emesa, in Syria].

CLAUDIUS GOTHICUS.

[Marcus Aurelius Claudius was born in Illyria, of an obscure family, in the year of Rome 967 or 968 (A. D. 214 or 215). He was governor of that province, under Valerian and Gallienus. The latter summoned him to Italy, for the purpose of guarding Turin, while Gallienus besieged Aureolus. Upon the death of the emperor, Claudius was saluted Augustus by the army and senate. The victory which he gained over the Goths in Moesia, in the year 1022 (A. D. 269), procured for him the surname of Gothicus. He died of the plague, near Sirmium in Pannonia, in the year of Rome 1023 (A. D. 270)].

CENSORINUS.

[Censorinus was proclaimed emperor against his consent by the legions in Italy, during the absence of Claudius, who was engaged in the war with the Goths, in the year of Rome 1023 (A. D. 270). He perished by the hands of those who had invested him with the purple, seven days afterwards].

Goltzius and others have published coins of Censorinus, but they have not been authenticated.

QUINTILLUS.

[Marcus Aurelius Claudius Quintillus, brother of Claudius Gothicus, was invested with the purple by the army under his command, near Aquileia, upon the news of the death of Claudius, in the year of Rome 1023 (A. D. 270). But the soldiers having received intelligence of the election of Aurelian by the legions of Pannonia, abandoned Quintillus, who caused his veins to be opened, and expired, according to most historians, after a short reign of seventeen days. Zosimus, however, says he reigned some months; and Eckhel, remarking on the variety of the types of the coins of Quintillus, is of opinion that his reign was not so short as has been represented].

SEVERINA.

[Ulpia Severina, the wife of the emperor Aurelian, is not mentioned by any historian; but from her Greek coins struck at Alexandria, it appears that she survived her husband. On these she has the name of Ulpia, from which Eckhel thinks it probable that she was daughter of Ulpian Crinitus, a descendant of Trajan, who adopted Aurelian].

PRINCES OF PALMYRA.

ODENATHUS.

[Septimius Odenathus was born at Palmyra; according to some writers, of an obscure family, but according to others, he traced his descent from princes. Odenathus took the title of king, after his defeat of the Persian army, in the year of Rome 1014 (A. D. 261). He was associated with Gallienus in the empire, and invested with the title of Augustus in 1017 (A. D. 264), in reward for his services against Sapor, after the capture of Valerian. This brave prince was assassinated by his cousin Maeonius, in the year of Rome 1019 or 1020 (A. D. 266, or 267)].

The coins published of this prince are not authenticated. The name of Septimius occurs on an inscription found at Palmyra. (See Eckhel, tom. vii.).

ZENOBIA.

[Septimia Zenobia, the wife of Odenathus, was created queen by her husband in the year of Rome 1014 (A. D. 261). After his death she took upon herself the titles of Augusta and Queen of the East, which she governed in the name of her infant children, who were created Caesars. As soon as Aurelian was proclaimed emperor, he resolved to curb Zenobia. After two battles, he overthrew her army, and subsequently took her prisoner. She ended her days on an estate near Tibur, which had been presented to her by the conqueror, in the year of Rome 1026 (A. D. 273)].

THIRD BRASS.

ZENOBIA. AVG. The head of Zenobia on a crescent.—Rev. PIETAS.

AVGG. A woman standing, extending her hand towards a child by her side. (Tanini. Sup. ad Band.)

This is the only Latin coin of Zenobia, but it is not accredited. Her other coins are Greek, and struck at Alexandria. They are extremely rare.

HERODES, HERENNIANUS, AND TIMOLAUS.

[Of the first of these princes (the son of Odenathus by his first wife), and of the other two (his sons by Zenobia), there are no authentic coins. Pinkerton has described a unique Greek coin of Timolaus, in the cabinet of Doctor Hunter].

VABALATHUS.

[Vabalathus Athenodorus, the son of Zenobia by, as is supposed, an Arab prince, her first husband, was raised by his mother to the Imperial dignity at the same time as his brothers, in the year of Rome 1019 or 1020 (A. D. 266 or 267). He was made prisoner with Zenobia in 1026 (A. D. 273). The time of his death is not known].

Base silver, or third brass, without the head of Aurelian - - - R 6
 ,, with the head of Aurelian - - - - - R 2

The names of Vabalathus Athenodorus have been given to two different princes, but in reality one of them is a translation of the other. Vabalathus, or Vhabalathus, is a Syriac word, and Athenodorus is its Greek interpretation; namely, Given of Minerva. (Mionnet, tom. ii, p. 109). Froelich and Corsini have endeavoured to interpret the meaning of the letters, VCRIMDR. but they are not satisfactory.

MAEONIUS.

[Maeonius assumed the purple after he had assassinated his cousin Odenathus and his son Herodes, in the year of Rome 1019 or 1020. He was shortly after put to death by order of Zenobia].

FIRMUS.

[Marcus Firmus, a rich merchant of Egypt, assumed the Imperial purple in the city of Alexandria, in the year of Rome 1026 (A. D. 273). He was shortly after defeated by Aurelian, taken prisoner, tortured and put to death].

Goltzius produces a coin of this usurper, but it has not been authenticated. According to Vopiscus, he coined money at Alexandria. A piece is described in the Pembroke collection, which is considered dubious. I am, however, informed by an eminent numismatist, that he has seen what he considers to be an undoubted coin of Firmus.

TACITUS.

[Marcus Claudius Tacitus was a senator, and traced his descent from the great historian of that name. The senate elected him emperor in the year of Rome 1028 (A. D. 275). He reigned but six months and about twenty days, and died at Tarsus in Cilicia, or, as some say, at Tyana in Cappadocia, in the year of Rome 1029 (A. D. 276). Eutropius and the Victors say he died a natural death, but Zosimus and Zonarus tell us that he was killed by his soldiers].

FLORIANUS.

[Marcus Annius Florianus, the brother of Tacitus, was praefect of the Praetorians, during the brief reign of that prince, and after his death was proclaimed emperor by the legions of Cilicia. Syria, however, favoured the cause of Probus. The claims of either party were about to be settled by a battle, when Florianus was murdered by his own soldiers, at Tarsus, three months after he had assumed the purple, 1029 (A. D. 276)].

CARUS.

[Marcus Aurelius Carus was born at Narbonne in Illyricum,* about the year of Rome 983 (A. D. 230). He was Praetorian praefect under

* Eutropius says, Narbonne in Gaul, but this is an error. (See Scaliger, Animad. ad Euseb. Chron. p. 241).

Probus, and after the death of that prince, was elected emperor by the legions of Pannonia, his title, according to most authors, being ratified by the senate. Carus was killed by thunder, after the taking of Ctesiphon, in Assyria; but some say he died a natural death, and that his attendants fired his tent in an excess of grief, and consumed the body of their master, in the year of Rome 1036 (A. D. 283), the year after his election].

CARINUS.

[Marcus Aurelius Carinus, the eldest son of Carus, was born in the year of Rome 1002 (A. D. 249), and created Caesar with his brother Numerianus in 1035 (A. D. 282). He governed the provinces of the East (while his father and brother were maintaining the war against the Persians) with the title of Emperor, but without that of Augustus: this latter title he assumed upon the death of Carus, while his brother was also saluted Augustus by the army under his command, 1036 (A. D. 283). Carinus was assassinated by a tribune, after a battle with Diocletian, who, upon the death of Numerianus, had been elected emperor by the legions of the East, in the year of Rome 1038 (A. D. 285)].

DIOCLETIANUS.

[Caius Valerius Diocletianus was born a slave, at Dioclea, or Doclia, in Dalmatia, in the year of Rome 998 (A. D. 245). He was General of the army in Maesia, under Probus; and having accompanied Carus in his war against the Persians, he, upon the death of that emperor, served under Numerianus. In 1037, the army of the East proclaimed him emperor, the deaths of Numerianus and Carinus having removed the only obstacles to his elevation. In 1039 (A. D. 286) he took as his colleague in the empire, Maximianus Herculus, to whom the government of the West was confided, while Diocletian ruled the provinces of the east. In 1045 (A. D. 292), Diocletian adopted Galerius Maximianus, and created him Caesar, while Maximianus Herculius conferred the same title on Constantius Chlorus. In the year of Rome 1058 (A. D. 305), Diocletian abdicated the empire, having nominated Galerius Maximianus, Augustus, and Maximianus Daza, Caesar. At the same time, Maximianus Herculius retired from the government, having declared as his successor Constantius Chlorus, and nominated Severus, Caesar. Diocletian died at Salona, in Dalmatia, whither he had retired upon his abdication, in the year of Rome 1066 (A. D. 313)].

PAX. AVGGG. Peace, standing, with her attributes. In the field, S. P. In the exergue, MLXXI.

The coins of Maximianus and Diocletianus, with these types, deserve especial notice. We learn from history that these emperors recognised the title which Carausius had assumed; but we know at the same time that they were not enabled to depose and punish the usurper. Mionnet, either doubting the authenticity of coins of these princes with AVGGG., or passing them over through inadvertence, does not notice the types here described, although they are of considerable rarity. But we have no proof that they were struck by authority of Diocletianus and Maximianus; while, on the other hand, there appear some grounds for believing that they were minted by the usurper himself. Many coins of Carausius bear AVGGG.: and this is not surprising, for he would naturally publish the recognition of his title by Diocletianus and his colleague: but those of the emperors, though very common with AVGG., are of rare occurrence with AVGGG. Now it is somewhat singular, that the two coins in the British Museum with PAX. AVGGG. are in fabric exceedingly like the rude coins of Carausius; so much so, that they might, if it were not for the legends, by a careless observer be supposed to belong to that personage. Eckhel (see Doct. Num. Vet.), after quoting a coin with VIRTVS. AVGGG., observes that it bears testimony to the truth of the account of the recognition of Carausius by Diocletianus and Maximianus: but he does not notice that on the Continent these coins are of great rarity, and even in England are of unfrequent occurrence; a circumstance certainly in favour of the supposition that they were minted by Carausius.

MAXIMIANUS HERCULES.

[Marcus Aurelius Valerius Maximianus was born near Sirmium, in Pannonia, in the year of Rome 1003 (A. D. 250). His parents were peasants, and he served as a common soldier in the Roman army. He was associated in the empire with Diocletian, in the year of Rome 1039 (A. D. 286), having, as is supposed, been created Caesar in the preceding year. Maximianus abdicated the empire at Milan at the same time as his colleague Diocletian, in the year of Rome 1058 (A. D. 305); after nominating as his successor Constantius Chlorus, and creating Severus, Caesar, Diocletian having raised to the Eastern Empire Galerius Maximianus, and created Maximinus Daza, Caesar. At the persuasion of his son Maxentius, Maximianus resumed the government at Rome in the following year; but having failed in his attempt to deprive his son of the imperial dignity, the troops mutinied and drove him from the city (1061). He fled to Gaul, to the court of Constantine, whom he had created Caesar in the preceding year, and to whom he had given his daughter Faustina in marriage. Here, in the absence of Constantine, he again attempted to regain the imperial dignity (1062), A. D. 309, but was obliged to take refuge in the city of Marseilles, where he was made prisoner, and deprived of the purple. Constantine, nevertheless, allowed him apartments in his own palace: but, having attempted the life of that prince, he was compelled to choose the manner of his death. Maximianus terminated his eventful life at the age of sixty by strangling himself, in the year of Rome 1063 (A. D. 310)].

[MAXIMIANUS, AND DIOCLETIANUS].

MAXIMIANVS. AVG. Laureated bust of Maximianus, with the paludamentum.—Rev. DIOCLETIANVS. AVG. Laureated head of Diocletianus. (Size of the quinarius).

EUTROPIA.

[Eutropia, the wife of Maximianus Hercules, was a Syrian lady. But little is known of her; and the coins given by Goltzius, legend GAL. VAL. EVTROPIA. AVG. are not authenticated. Vidua has attributed to her a coin, which Eckhel informs us 'is one of Placilla, wife of Theodosius the Great, altered to an Eutropia].

AMANDUS.

[Amandus assumed the purple in Gaul in 1038 (A. D. 285); but was encountered by Maximianus Hercules, and killed in battle, in the year of Rome 1040. Banduri and others have given coins of this usurper, but their authenticity is doubted. (See Banduri, vol. ii, p. 87. Also Tanini].

AELIANUS.

[Aelianus, another usurper in the reigns of Diocletianus and Maximianus, was born of an obscure family in Gaul. He associated with Amandus in the usurpation, and was slain about the same time as that personage].

There are no authenticated coins of Aelianus. That given by Goltzius, on which he is styled AVLVS. POMPONIVS. AELIANVS. is not accredited.

CARAUSIUS.

[Marcus Aurelius Valerius Carausius was born in Belgic Gaul, of obscure parents.* He had enjoyed the reputation of a skilful pilot and a brave soldier, when he was appointed by Maximianus to the command of the fleet stationed at Boulogne, to suppress the piratical ravages of the Franks. If we may credit the Roman historians, the admiral did not faithfully discharge his trust; but suffering the German pirates to sail from their harbours, he seized upon them as they returned from their expeditions, and appropriated a considerable share of the spoil to his own use. Maximian, informed of his cupidity, gave orders for his death, when Carausius, having secured to his interest the fleet which he commanded, sailed over to Britain, in the year of Rome 1040, (A. D. 287). Here he was well received, and assumed the purple and the title of Augustus. Unable, from the loss of their fleet, to cope with the usurper, Maximianus and his colleague Diocletianus consented to acknowledge his claim, in 1042 (A. D. 289). Carausius held his title with eclat; his fleet swept the seas; his troops repulsed the Caledonians in the North, and the bravest of the Franks were proud to enlist under his banner: but in the year 1046 (A. D. 293), this bold and successful usurper, who had defied the power of Rome, fell by the hand of his own minister, Allectus].

* Gibbon, in his account of this usurper, observes that Eutropius, Aurelius Victor, and Eumenius leave us in doubt as to his origin. Their words are "Vilissime natus," "Bataviæ alumnis," and "Menapiæ civis." The reader will therefore perhaps allow the term "obscure," if he be not a disciple of Stukeley, whose Medallic History of Carausius is one of the most extraordinary works in existence. This writer, by the help of Richard of Cirencester, discovers Carausius to have been a British prince, and a native of St. David's! The work will ever remain a proof that great learning is at best but an indifferent gift, when unaccompanied by discretion and judgment.

VITAVI. A woman standing, holding in each hand a serpent. (Cabinet of F. Douce, Esq.)

This most extraordinary type is believed to be the only one of the kind in the Roman series, and the coin itself is probably unique. The singularity of the device encourages an attempt at an explanation of its meaning. The female figure would appear to be the good Genius of Carausius, and she grasps in each hand the enemies of her protégé, the emperors Diocletian and his colleague, represented as serpents. May we not suppose, therefore, that this very curious coin was struck by Carausius immediately upon his arrival in Britain, before the recognition of his title by the emperors? It seems to confirm the account of the historians, who inform us that the rebel admiral, previous to his carrying off the Roman fleet, had received intelligence of some meditated punishment from the emperors.

ALLECTUS.

[This usurper having assassinated Carausius, in the year of Rome 1046 (A. D. 293), assumed the purple in Britain. Allectus did not possess the ability of his predecessor; during the latter part of whose reign, Boulogne was captured by Constantius Chlorus, who had made great preparations for recovering the island. The armament at length was completed, and the landing having been made on two different parts of the coast, Allectus was encountered by Asclepiodotus, the general of Constantius, and slain in the battle, in the year of Rome 1049 (A. D. 296)].

ACHILLEUS.

[An usurper in Egypt, in the reign of Diocletian, defeated and put to death by that emperor].

The small brass coin, in imitation of Egyptian fabric, is a modern forgery. No certain coins are known of Achilleus. Those given by Goltz are considered spurious.

DOMITIUS DOMITIANUS.

[Lucius Domitius Domitianus, an usurper in the reign of Diocletianus, assumed the purple at Alexandria probably about the time of that emperor's abdication. The time of his death is not known, and the period of his revolt is only surmised from the circumstance, that when Latin coins began to be struck at Alexandria, those of Greek fabric and legend were discontinued. The last Greek coins struck in that city are of Diocletian, and bear the date IC (15) A. U. C., 151].

MAXENTIUS.

[Marcus Aurelius Valerius Maxentius, the son of Maximianus Hercules and his wife Eutropia, was born about the year of Rome 1035 (A. D. 282). According to historians, he assumed the purple, together with his father, in the year 1059 (A. D. 306); but if the coins which give to Maxentius the title of Cæsar only, are received as evidence, it would appear that he was not raised to the empire until some time after. Maxentius maintained his usurpation against Severus and Galerius Maximianus, and secured Africa, in the year 1061 (A. D. 308). Having become embroiled with Constantine, the result was, an appeal to arms; and, in a battle near Rome, the army of Maxentius was routed, and he himself drowned while crossing the Tiber in his flight. 1065 (A. D. 312)].

ROMULUS.

[Marcus Aurelius Romulus, the son of Maxentius, was born, as is supposed, about the year of Rome 1059 (A. D. 306), declared Caesar by his father in the following year, and Augustus a short time afterwards. Romulus died in the year of Rome 1062 (A. D. 309)].

The words NVBIS. CONS., NVB. AVG., &c., have puzzled all the numismatists. Jobert thinks that the legend should stand NOSTRAE. VRBIS. CONS. and that the R is by accident omitted; but this could not happen in all the coins of Romulus. Cardinal Noris speaks of a coin with NOB. CONS. (Nobilissimo Consulis), but this is not authenticated. Mionnet says, "On ignore, absolument le sens des mots 'NVBIS. CONS.' &c."—See the remarks of the Baron Bimard on this legend, in the Science de Medailles, tom ii, p. 197.

ALEXANDER.

[Alexander, an usurper in Africa, in the reign of Maxentius, was born of an obscure family in Pannonia, or, according to Zosimus,* in Phrygia. He was lieutenant of the praefect of Africa, under Maxentius, and having become embroiled with that tyrant, he, to avoid the consequences, caused himself to be proclaimed emperor at Carthage, in the year of Rome 1061 (A. D. 308). The army of Alexander was encountered by that of Rufius Volusianus, whom Maxentius had sent against him, and he himself taken prisoner and strangled, 1064 (A. D. 311)].

LICINIUS.

[Publius Flavius Claudius Galerius Valerius Licinianus Licinius, the brother-in-law of Constantine the Great, and son-in-law of Constantius Chlorus, was born of an obscure family in Dacia, in the year of Rome 1046 (A. D. 263). Upon the death of Severus he was declared Caesar and Augustus, and associated in the empire with Galerius Maximianus, 1060 (A. D. 307). In the year of Rome 1066, he espoused the sister of Constantine (Constantia); but his persecutions of the Christians led to a rupture between them, and an appeal to arms was the consequence. Licinius was worsted in several engagements; when he offered terms to the victor, and it was finally arranged that Constantine should remain emperor of the West, while Licinius governed the East. But in the year 1076 (A. D. 323), the flame was rekindled; Licinius was again unfortunate; and, after losing two battles, he fled to Thessalonica, where, by order of Constantine, he was strangled, in the year of Rome 1077 (A. D. 324)].

The coins given by Banduri, on which this prince is styled Caesar only, whereby it would appear that Galerius had first given him that title alone, are thought by Eckhel to be either false, or to belong to Licinius, junior.

CONSTANTIA.

[Flavia Constantia, the daughter of Constantius Chlorus, sister of Constantine the Great, and wife of Licinius, was born in Britain, and married to the emperor, in the year of Rome 1066 (A. D. 313). She died about the year 1083 (A. D. 330)].

The coins of this princess, given by Goltzius, are not authenticated.

LICINIUS THE YOUNGER.

[Flavius Valerianus Licinianus Licinius, the son of the elder Licinia by Constantia, was born in the year of Rome 1068 (A. D. 315). He was declared Caesar* in 1070 (A. D. 317). Upon the death of his father, in 1076, he was stripped of his title; and, in 1079 (A. D. 326), executed, by order of Constantine].

VALENS.

[Aurelius Valerius Valens, an officer in the army of Licinius, was declared Caesar by that emperor, when about to engage in the war with Constantinus, in the year of Rome 1067 (A.D. 314); though if the coin described below, is authentic, it would appear that he also received the title of Augustus. Upon the reestablishment of peace between the two princes, the first article of the treaty, was the abdication of this new associate; Constantine sternly refusing to acknowledge him. Valens was deprived of his title, and shortly afterwards fell by the hand of Licinius himself].

STYLE:—IMP. C. AVR. VAL. VALENS. P. F. AVG.

A coin of Valens in third brass, occurs in the catalogue of d'Ennery, (p. 635, No. 4660); but its authenticity is doubted. It is thus described:—

IMP. C. AVR. VAL. VALENS. Laureated head of Valens.—Rev. IOVI. CONSERVATORI. AVGG. Jupiter standing, holding the hasta and a Victory: an eagle at his feet, holding a garland in its beak. In the field to the right, K., to the left, a garland, and X. A. In the exergue, ALE.

The same type is given by Goltzius.

MARTINIANUS.

[Marcus Martinianus was magister officiorum at the court of Licinius, who conferred upon him the titles of Caesar and Augustus, previous to the battle of Chrysopolis, the war having been rekindled between that prince and Constantine, in the year of Rome 1076 (A. D. 323). The disastrous issue of that engagement destroyed for ever the hopes of Licinius, and Martinianus was sacrificed to the vengeance of the conqueror].

Third brass - - - - - R 6

The silver, with an altar; legend, CONSECRATIO; is a modern fabrication.

IOVI. CONSERVATORI. Jupiter standing, holding a Victory on a globe, and the hasta: at his feet, on one side, an eagle; on the other, a figure kneeling in an attitude of supplication. In the field, XIIB. (or XIII. or XIII.) In the exergue, SMNA. (or SMNB. or SMNF. or SMNΔ. or SMNT.) The obverse has the radiated head of Martinianus: legend, D. N. (or D. N. M.) MARTINIANVS. P. F. AVG. (or D. N. or D. N. M.) MARTINIANO. P. F. AVG. (Plate xi, No. 8).

Valued by Mionnet at sixty francs; but with the legend in the dative case, at seventy-two francs.

CONSTANTINUS MAGNUS.

[Flavius Galerius Valerius Constantinus, the son of Constantius Chlorus and Helena, son in law of Maximianus Hercules, and brother in law of Licinius, was probably born at Dardania in Dacia, in the year of Rome 1027 (A. D. 214); although Britain and Drepanum have each been mentioned as the place of his birth. Upon the death of his father at York, he was proclaimed Caesar and Augustus by the legions of Britain, in 1059 (A. D. 306). Galerius Maximianus, however, refused him the latter title, and conferred it upon Severus. In the following year Maximianus Hercules created him Augustus, and gave him his daughter Fausta in marriage; but Constantinus prudently contented himself with the title of Son of the Augusti, which was also conferred upon Maximinus Daza. The latter having assumed the purple in 1061 (A. D. 308), Constantinus was created Augustus by Galerius. In 1064 (A. D. 311) he embraced the Christian religion, and having survived his rivals, remained sole master of the empire in 1076 (A. D. 323). Constantinus quitted Rome for Byzantium, having taken umbrage at the lampoons of the citizens, in 1083 (A. D. 330), and named the city Constantinople. He ended his eventful life at Nicomedia in Bithynia, when about to march against the Persians, in the year of Rome 1090 (A. D. 337)].

The last legend has been thus explained by Eckhel: divus. venerabilis. CONSTANTINVS. P. trium. AVGGustorum. It is founded on an inscription given by Maffei. Mionnet thinks it probable that the letters DV. are by mistake placed thus by the engraver, and that they probably signify DIVVS.

MONETA. VRBIS. VESTRAE. A similar type.

PRINCIPI. IVVENTVTIS. The prince standing, in the paludamentum, holding an ensign in his right hand: two captives seated on the ground.

6.

7.

VICTORIAE. BEATISSIMORVM. CAESS. Victory seated, holding a buckler, inscribed VOT. X.

No. 6 is much the rarest; the next in rarity are Nos. 1, 2, 5, and 7.

THIRD BRASS, WITH RARE REVERSES.

1.

ALAMANNIA. DEVICTA. Victory, holding a trophy and a palm branch.

2.

BEATA. TRANQVILLITAS. A globe charged with three stars, and placed on a cippus, inscribed VOTIS. XX. In the field, C. R. In the exergue, PLC. The obverse has the bust of Crispus, holding a Victory on a globe: legend, CRISPVS. N. C. COS. II.

3.

IOVI. CONSERVATORI. CAESS. Jupiter, standing. In the field, a garland and A. or F. or E. In the exergue, SMK.

4.

SAECVLI. FELICITAS. A cippus: above, a buckler, inscribed AVG. In the field, R. or PR. In the exergue, PT. or RP. or RQ.

5.

6.

Same legend. Anubis standing, holding an ear of corn in his right hand, and in his left the chlamys and a caduceus.

7.

Same legend. Isis standing on a galley. (Size of the quinarius).

8.

VOT. XV. FEL. XX. R. C. within a laurel garland.

No. 2 is the rarest: the next in rarity are Nos. 1, 5, 6, 7, 8. Of the other third brass of Crispus, those with P. LON. in the exergue, are the least common. They are interesting from the supposition that they, like the other coins of this family, with the same letters, were struck in London.

HELENA.

[This princess is not alluded to in history, but from the mention of her name together with that of Crispus, in the Theodosian code, she is supposed to have been the wife of that prince, although it does not clearly state that she was. The supposition is strengthened by the style of the coin described below, which bears a strong resemblance to that of Fausta, the supposed wife of Constantius the Second].

Same legend. A similar type, but with two standards in the middle. In the exergue, CONST.

No. 2 is much the rarest.

HANNIBALLIANUS.

[Flavius Claudius Hanniballianus, the brother of Delmatius, was born at Toulouse, in the year of Rome ——. This prince received from his uncle Constantine, the title of King, and the government of Pontus Cappadocia and Armenia were assigned to him, in the year of Rome 1088 (A. D. 335). Hanniballianus perished, with his brother Delmatius, in 1090 (A. D. 337)].

No. 2 is much the rarest.

COSTANTINUS II.

[Flavius Claudius Julius Constantinus, the son of Constantine the Great and his wife Fausta, was born at Arles, in the year of Rome 1069 (A. D. 316), and declared Cæsar in the following year by his father and Licinius, at which time Crispus and the younger Licinius were raised to the same dignity. When Constantine the Great made the division of the empire, in 1088 (A. D. 335), this prince received for his share the provinces of Gaul, Spain, and Britain; and, upon the death of his father, in 1090 (A. D. 337), the senate and the army proclaimed him emperor. The second Constantine, however, enjoyed his power but a short period. A rupture between him and his brother Constans, led to a war; and Constantine was defeated and killed near Aquileia, in the year of Rome 1093 (A. D. 340)].

CONSTANS.

[Flavius Julius Constans, the son of Constantine the Great and Fausta, was born about the year of Rome 1073 (A. D. 320). In 1086 (A. D. 333) he was invested with the title of Caesar, and two years afterwards obtained the government of Illyria, Italy, and Africa. Upon the death of his father, he participated in the division of the empire with his brothers, 1090 (A. D. 337). The death of the second Constantine, near Aquileia, in 1093 (A. D. 340), left him master of the East. Constans was assassinated at Helena, at the foot of the Pyrenees, by the partisans of Magnentius, who had usurped the purple at Autun, in Gaul, in the year of Rome 1103 (A. D. 350)].

35.

VIRTVS. EXERCITVS. GALL. Mars marching, with spear and buckler: two captives on the ground. In the exergue, TR. - AU

In gold, No. 6 is by far the rarest: the next in rarity are Nos. 15, 19, 20, 29, and 33; then Nos. 8, 10, 14, 17, 22, 23, 31, 34, and 35. In silver, No. 1 is the rarest: the next in rarity are Nos. 2, 3, 7, 21, 25, and 30.

BRASS MEDALLIONS.

BONONIA. OCEANEN. A galley, with rowers: the emperor, armed with spear and buckler, standing on the deck; behind him, two standards; Victory on the prow, with garland and palm branch: a figure swimming: a light-house, or tower, on a rock on the shore.

Valued by Mionnet at 200 francs.

Bononia is the modern Boulogne, from which Constans, in the winter of 342-3, set sail for Britain, to repress the incursions of the Picts, who were wasting the province.

2.

DEBELLATORI. GENTT. BARBARR. The emperor on horseback, bare-headed, riding over two enemies, one of whom he pierces with his spear. (The size varies).

3.

GAVDIVM. POPVLI. ROMANI. A laurel garland, within which is inscribed SIC. V. SIC. X.

4.

GAVDIVM. ROMANORVM. Victory, seated on a coat of mail, inscribing on a buckler VOT. XX.

5.

GLORIA. ROMANORVM. The emperor togated, standing, holding the hasta and a globe.

6.

Same legend. The emperor togated, standing, holding a branch and the parazonium.

7.

Same legend. The emperor helmeted, standing, holding ears of corn and the labarum, his right foot on a captive.

The medallion engraved in Banduri, has a helmeted Victory holding ears of corn and the labarum.

8.

Same legend. Rome, and a woman with turreted crown, standing; between them a cippus, on which is placed a buckler, inscribed VOT. XXX. MVLT. XXXX. In the exergue, R. The obverse has the armed bust of Constans, with a spear: legend, D. N. CONSTANTII. AVGVSTI. (sic).

9.

ROMA. AETERNA. Rome, seated.

10.

ROMA. BEATA. Rome, seated on a buckler.

11.

VRBS. ROMA. Rome seated, holding a spear and a globe surmounted by a Victory.

12.

VRBS. ROMA. BEATA. A similar type.

13.

VICTORI. GENTIVM. BARBARR. The emperor riding over two enemies, one of whom he pierces with his spear.

14.

VICTORIA. AVGG. The emperor on horseback, preceded by Victory.

15.

VICTORIA. AVGG. NN. Victory seated on arms, holding a buckler, inscribed VOT. X.

16.

Same legend. Victory seated, holding a buckler on her knees. In the exergue, CONS.

17.

VICTORIA. AVGVSTI. Victory, marching; two captives, seated on the ground.

18.

Same legend. A woman with turreted crown, seated, holding a cornucopia and a garland.

19.

VICTORIA. AVGVSTORVM. Victory, marching; a palm branch on the ground. In the exergue, SIS. Q.

20.

Same legend. The emperor on horseback, preceded by Victory.

21.

VIRTVS. AVG. The emperor, standing; a captive at his feet.

22.

VIRTVS. AVG. N. The emperor on horseback, piercing an enemy with his spear.

23.

VIRTVS. AVGG. The emperor, seated near a trophy, and Victory standing.

24.

VIRTVS. AVGG. NN. The emperor standing, holding a spear and a globe.

25.

VIRTVS. CAESARVM. The emperor standing, his hand resting on a trophy, at the foot of which is a captive.

No. 1 is by far the rarest; of the others, Nos. 3, 6, and 20, are the rarest; and Nos. 10, 11, 12, 13, 15, 16, 19, 21, 24, and 25, are the least rare.

SECOND BRASS.

TRIVMFVS. (sic) CAESARVM. Victory in a quadriga, full faced.
In the exergue, TR. (Tanini).

THIRD BRASS.

VOTA. PVBLICA. Isis-Pharia, standing on a galley. (Size of the quinarius).

SATURNINUS III.

[History does not mention this usurper, whose revolt, if the coin given by Banduri is genuine, must have been in the time of Constans or Constantius; for it is at this period that the legend, FELIX. TEMPORVM. REPARATIO. first appears on the Roman coins. Mionnet observes that this Saturninus should not be confounded with the usurpers of the same name in the reigns of Gallienus and Probus].

A coin is thus described by Banduri, but its authenticity is doubted.

THIRD BRASS.

FEL. TEMP. REPARATIO. A soldier striking with a spear a horseman, who appears falling beneath the blow. In the exergue, B.
SIS.

CONSTANTIUS II.

[Flavius Julius Constantius, the second son of Constantine and Fausta, was born at Sirmium in Pannonia, in the year of Rome 1070 (A. D. 317), and declared Caesar by his father in 1076 (A. D. 323). He obtained the government of the East in 1088 (A. D. 335). Upon the death of Constantine the Great, in 1090 (A. D. 337), he shared in the division of the empire, of which, by the murder of Constans, in 1103 (A. D. 350), he became sole master. Constantius died at Mopsucrene, near Tarsus in Cilicia, when about to oppose his cousin Julianus, in the year of Rome 1114 (A. D. 361)].

NONIUS ?

[A usurper, of whom history makes no mention, but whose revolt probably took place in the reign of Constantius II. Beauvais is of opinion that the coins described below, were struck for Regalianus, a usurper in the reign of Gallienus, and states that this personage bore the name of Nonnius, which name, however, is found only on the coins given by Goltzius, and not on any authentic pieces struck by Regalianus: besides, one of the barbarous coins here described, has the standard of the cross, which proves it to be of a later period than the reign of Gallienus. Eckhel thinks that these coins belong in reality to some prince whose name is known, but that they are the work of ignorant moneyers, who were incapable of producing a legible coin].

The following are described in the catalogue d'Ennery, p. 641.

MAGNENTIUS.

[Flavius Magnus Magnentius, a usurper in the reign of Constantius II. was born of obscure parents, either in Britain or Germany, about the year of Rome 1056 (A. D. 303). It is said that he was made a prisoner of war; and that to avoid perpetual servitude, he enlisted under the Roman standard, and was much distinguished for his bravery. He became after a time, commander of the Jovian and Herculean legions, established on the banks of the Rhine. In 1103 (A. D. 350), he assumed the purple, at Augustodunum (the modern Autun), and the murder of Constans followed immediately after. Constantius offered him the provinces of Gaul, Spain, and Britain; but Magnentius rejected his terms: a war was the consequence, and after two engagements, in which the army of the usurper was worsted, Magnentius fled to Lyons, and stabbed himself, in the year of Rome 1106 (A. D. 353)].

CONSTANTINA.

[Constantina, the daughter of Constantinus the Great, by his wife Fausta, was first married to her cousin Hanniballianus, in the year of Rome 1088 (A. D. 335), and subsequently, in 1104 (A. D. 351), to Constantius Gallus. This princess died a short time before the execution of her second husband, 1107 (A. D. 354)].

The coins of Constantina, given by Goltzius, are not authenticated.

SYLVANUS.

[Sylvanus, an usurper, in the reign of Constantius II., was the son of a Gaulish captain, and under that emperor, employed to check the barbarians who threatened Gaul. Sylvanus fell a victim to the foulest treachery. He was accused of a conspiracy against the emperor, which, however, to the satisfaction of Constantius, was proved to be entirely false; but in the mean time Sylvanus endeavoured, by assuming the defensive, to avoid the impending danger, and invested himself with the purple at Cologne, in the year of Rome 1108 (A. D. 355). He was assassinated by those who had assisted him in his usurpation, at the end of a month; and the troops he had commanded, returned to their allegiance].

Goltzius gives coins of Sylvanus, but they are not authenticated.

JULIANUS II.

[Flavius Claudius Julianus, commonly called Julian the Apostate, son of Julius Constantius and Basilina, nephew of Constantine the Great, and brother of Constantius Gallus, was born at Constantinople, in the year of Rome 1084 (A. D. 331). In 1108 (A. D. 355), he was created Caesar, by Constantius II., who gave him in marriage, his sister Helena. Julian was compelled by the legions of Gaul, to assume the purple at Lutetia (Paris), in the year of Rome 1113 (A. D. 360), and the death of Constantius in the following year left him sole master of the empire. He died of a wound received in a battle with the Persians, near the Tigris, three years after his election].

 Constantius Chlorus. (See Eckhel, tom. viii.)

JOVIANUS.

[Flavius Jovianus, the son of Varronianus, was born at Singidonum in Pannonia, in the year of Rome 1084 (A. D. 331). He was head officer in the palace of Julian; and upon the death of that prince, was elected emperor; "not so much on account of his own merit," says Eutropius, "as on that of his father, who was a great favourite of the soldiers," 1116 (A.D. 363). Jovianus died at Dardastana in Bithynia, having concluded a dishonourable peace with Sapor, king of Persia, in the year of Rome 1117 (A. D. 364), after a short reign of seven months and twenty days].

No. 1 is the rarest.

SECOND BRASS.

1.

VICTORIA. ROMANORVM. The emperor standing, in a military habit, holding the standard of the cross, and a globe surmounted by a Victory. In the exergue, ANT. B. or ANT. Γ. or TES. B. or TES. Δ.

2.

VOTA. PVBLICA. Isis seated, suckling Orus.

3.

Same legend. Two women; their bodies terminating in serpents, supporting a vase, from which a serpent, or an asp, is escaping.

The last two types, and the following in third brass, are rather singular for the coins of a Christian emperor, as they resemble the money of Julian. (See pp. 304, 5). The existence of such types on the reverse of money bearing the head of Jovian, who professed the Christian religion, can only be accounted for by supposing that they were struck in some distant province, and that the reverses which may have been designed for the coins of Julian, were adopted for those of the new emperor, whose religion might not have been known to the mint masters.

No. 3 is much the rarest; and No. 2 is much rarer than No. 1.

THIRD BRASS.

1.

VOTA. PVBLICA. Anubis standing, holding the sistrum in his right hand, and in his left a caduceus.

2.

Same legend. Isis in a biga of mules, holding the sistrum.

SEVERA.

[Valeria Severa was married to the emperor Valentinianus before his elevation, and repudiated by him about the year of Rome 1121 (A. D. 368). Severa died, as is supposed, in the reign of her son Gratianus].

Goltzius gives coins of this lady, but they are not authenticated.

JUSTINA.

[Flavia Justina, the second wife of Valentinianus the First, was born in Sicily. She was the widow of Magnentius, and married the Emperor Valentinianus, in the year of Rome 1121 (A. D. 368). Justina died at Thessalonica in Macedonia, in the year of Rome 1140 (A. D. 387)].

The coins of Justina, described by Goltzius, are not authenticated.

VALENS.

[Flavius Valens, the brother of Valentinianus the First, was born near Cibalæ in Pannonia, in the year of Rome 1081 (A. D. 328). He was associated with his brother in the empire in the year 1117 (A. D. 364), and appointed to the government of the East with the title of Augustus, while Valentinianus ruled the provinces of the West. Valens, according to Claudianus, was burnt to death in a house in which he had shut himself up, after his defeat by the Goths near Adrianople, in the year of Rome 1131 (A. D. 378). Other accounts vary; but he was never seen after the battle].

PROCOPIUS.

[Procopius was born of an illustrious family, in the year of Rome 1087 (A. D. 334), and was himself a man of learning, and a friend of the emperor Julianus, under whom he served as an officer. During the absence of Valens, in Syria, Procopius assumed the purple at Constantinople, 1118 (A. D. 365), but at the end of eight months was reduced by Valens, and given up by his own men to the conqueror, who caused him to be beheaded.*

* The account which Zosimus gives of Procopius (Book iv.) is curious and interesting; and, if it may be credited, would incline us to pity this unfortunate usurper, who, it would appear, assumed the purple as the only probable means of preserving his life. He had been forced by his enemies from the retirement he had sought, to struggle for the empire.

CONSTANTIA.

[There are no authentic coins of this lady. She was married to the emperor Gratianus, in 1127 (A. D. 374), and died some months before him].

VALENTINIANUS II.

[Flavius Valentinianus, the son of Valentinianus the First and Justina, was born at Acincum in Pannonia, in the year of Rome 1124 (A. D.
371). Upon the death of his father, he was saluted Augustus by the legions of Pannonia, and ruled jointly with his brother and his uncle 1128 (A. D. 375): Valentinianus having the government of Illyria, Africa, and Italy; Gratianus that of the Western Provinces; and Valens still ruling the East. Upon the death of Gratianus, Valentinianus succeeded to the government of the East, in 1136 (A. D. 383).
This emperor was assassinated at Vienna, in the year of Rome 1145
(A. D. 392)].

VALENTINIANVS. IVN. P. F. AG. (or AVG.) [On reverse, sometimes, RESTITVTOR. REIPVBLICAE.]—D. N. VALENTI-NIANVS. P. F. AVG.

The coins of this emperor without the word IVNIOR. cannot be distinguished from those of his father. In consequence of this, all those which bear simply, D. N. VALENTINIANVS. P. F. AVG., are assigned to the elder Valentinianus. The common coins bearing a helmeted bust,—Rev. a figure standing on a galley; legend, GLORIA. ROMANORVM.,—are supposed to belong to Valentinianus the Second. It should also be observed that the coins of Valentinianus the Third are only known to belong to him when they bear the name, PLACIDIUS.

THEODOSIUS MAGNUS.

[Theodosius, surnamed the Great, was born of an illustrious family, at Italica in Spain, in the year of Rome 1099 (A.D. 346). He was associated in the empire with Gratianus, and succeeded Valens in the government of the East in 1132 (A.D. 379). Theodosius died at Mediolanum (Milan), in the year of Rome 1148 (A.D. 395)].

STYLE:—D. N. THEODOSIVS. P. F. AV. (or AVG.) [On reverse, sometimes, TRVMFATOR. GENT. BARB.]

The coins which bear the name of Theodosius have always the same legend on the obverse; and it is difficult to distinguish to which of the two princes of this name they should be attributed. Some of them, however, without doubt, belong to the younger Theodosius; and these are the coins which bear on the reverse IMP. XXXXII. COS. XVII. P. P.; the first number evidently signifying the year of the reign of this prince, from the period that he was raised to the rank of Augustus; namely, in the year of Rome 1155 (A.D. 402). The forty-second year of his reign commenced in 1196 (A.D. 443), and the younger Theodosius had been exactly seventeen times consul. This cannot be applied to Theodosius the Great, who reigned only sixteen years. It should be observed, that legends like those in question are not found on the coins of the period in which the younger Theodosius reigned. Banduri and Mediobarba give other coins, which, however, have not been authenticated, bearing the legends, TR. P. XXXVII. COS. XVII. P. P., and TR. P. XXXXII. COS. XVIII. P. P. No coins with these legends are at present known: if really genuine, these also belong to the younger Theodosius; the numbers agreeing with the times that he had held the consulship and the tribunitian power. Again, the coins which bear the inscriptions, VOT. XX. MVLT. XXX., and VOT. XXX. MVLT. XXXX., are given to the same emperor; the elder Theodosius having reigned but sixteen years. A great many of the coins alluded to, bear on the obverse, the full-faced and helmeted bust of the emperor, with spear and buckler; and it is believed that all those which have a similar bust, whatever may be the legend on the reverse, belong to the younger Theodosius. In conclusion, the coins which bear on the reverse the letters xp. within a laurel garland, are also assigned to the second Theodosius; this description of type occurring for the first time on the coins of Placidia, wife of Constantius Patricius, and being, as is supposed, adopted after the reign of the first Theodosius, to whom the coins not bearing the legends above quoted, are given, although some of them may possibly belong to the other emperor of the same name.

MAGNUS MAXIMUS.

[Magnus Maximus was a Spaniard by birth, and commander of the legions in Britain under the emperor Gratianus. He raised the standard of revolt, and set out for Gaul with an immense army, in the year of Rome 1136 (A. D. 383). He subsequently procured the murder of Gratianus, and obtained by treaty as his portion of the empire the provinces on this side the Alps; but his insatiate ambition prompted him to invade Italy, from which the younger Valentinianus fled precipitately, 1140 (A. D. 387). Maximus was encountered and defeated by Theodosius in the following year, and fled to Aquileia, where he was seized and beheaded by order of that emperor].

CONSTANTINUS III.

[Flavius Claudius Constantinus, a private soldier, was proclaimed Augustus by the legions of Britain, and acknowledged by those of Gaul, in the year of Rome 1160 (A. D. 407). This usurper was encountered by Constantius, the general of Honorius, defeated and taken prisoner. His death followed soon after, 1164 (A. D. 411)].

* The last legend is found on the gold coin described below from Banduri. The coins of this usurper have frequently been confounded with those of the emperors of the same name; but it is now agreed, that those which bear AVGGG. or AVGGGG. belong to this usurper, as legends of this description were not used so early as the reigns of the two preceding emperors of the same name. Those, therefore, which are assigned by Bergerus to Constantinus the younger, and others given by Banduri to Constantinus Magnus, are restored to Constantinus III. Those also, which are similar to the denarius with VICTORIA. AVGGGG., although differing from it in the legend of the obverse, but with the same type on the obverse, and having on the reverse the same type of the female sedent figure, are appropriated to this usurper, as they resemble in fabric the coins of Constans II., his successor. Eckhel is of this opinion. (See Doct. Num. Vet., tom. viii, p. 177).

MAXIMUS.

[Maximus was proclaimed emperor in Spain by Count Gerontius, one of the generals of the usurper Constantinus, in 1162 (A. D. 409); but the Count having been reduced, and forced to lay violent hands upon himself, the life of Maximus was spared for a time. "The caprice," says Gibbon, "of the barbarians who ravaged Spain once more seated this imperial phantom on the throne; but they soon resigned him to the justice of Honorius; and the tyrant Maximus, after he had been shewn to the people of Ravenna and Rome, was publicly executed, 1164 (A. D. 411).”]

He was, however, in the following year deprived of the purple, but reassumed it in Gaul, upon the death of the Gothic king, in the same year, 1163 (A. D. 410). Attalus was captured by Constantius, in 1169 (A. D. 416), and sent to Honorius, who after causing two fingers of his right hand to be amputated, banished him to the island of Lipari, where he terminated his life].

[Aelia Eudoxia, or Eudocia, daughter of Leontius, an Athenian Sophist, was born about the year of Rome 1146 (A. D. 393), and married to the emperor Theodosius the younger, in 1174 (A. D. 421). Eudoxia died in retirement at Jerusalem, having been disgraced by her husband, in the year 1213 (A. D. 460)].

STYLE:—AEL. (or AELIA.) EVDOXIA. (or EVDOCIA.) AVG.
—AEL. EVDOXIA. FE.

Two ladies, of the name of Eudocia, or Eudoxia, each of whom bear the family name of Aelia, are mentioned by historians. The present was the wife of Theodosius the younger; the other was the consort of Arcadius. Banduri endeavours to distinguish their coins by supposing that those which bear the name of Eudocia belong to one empress, and those with Eudoxia to the other; but this has been refuted by Eckhel. There are coins which must belong to this lady; but it is not certain that there are any of the wife of Arcadius, although Nos. 1, 4, 5, 6, may probably belong to that empress.

VALENTINIANUS III.

[Placidius Valentinianus, the son of Constantius Patricius and Galla Placidia, was born at Ravenna in Cisalpine Gaul, in the year of Rome 1172 (A. D. 419). Upon the death of his father in 1174 (A. D. 421), he was taken by his mother to the court of Theodosius the younger. In 1177 (A. D. 424), he received the title of Caesar at Thessalonica; and was sent under the guardianship of his mother into Italy by the emperor Theodosius, when he took in the following year the style of Augustus, his troops having defeated and destroyed the usurper Johannes. Valentinianus the Third was murdered at Rome by the partizans of the senator Petronius Maximus, whose wife he had basely seduced, in the year of that city 1208 (A. D. 455)].

ATTILA.

[Attila succeeded to the government of the Huns, in the year of Rome 1187 (A. D. 434). In 1195 (A. D. 442), he ravaged the provinces of the East, and exacted tribute from the emperor Theodosius the Second. In 1204 (A. D. 451), he subdued the northern tribes, and ravaged Gaul; and, in the following year, rendered Valentinianus the Third tributary. Attila ended his eventful life in the year of Rome 1206, (A. D. 453)].

The coins described below have been given by numismatists to this celebrated warrior, but they have always been doubted by some, who have assigned them to the Gaulish chiefs of a much earlier period. Eckhel is of this opinion; and, indeed, their legend and types do not warrant their appropriation to Attila; nevertheless, they are here given for the satisfaction of the curious.

This aureus is in the collection of the British Museum. The continental numismatists doubt its authenticity; but it is certainly a genuine coin. It is, however, not so certain that it belongs to the wife of Olybrius, since the coins of Galla Placidia, wife of Constantius the Third, have legends and types very similar. The wife of Constantius III. may have borne the name of Aelia as well as that of Galla, in which case the coin in question would certainly appear to belong to her, instead of to the consort of Olybrius.

GLYCERIUS.

[Glycerius held high situations in the palace of the emperors of the West, and upon the death of Olybrius, assumed the purple at Ravenna, in Cisalpine Gaul, in the year of Rome 1226 (A. D. 473). He was dethroned by Julius Nepos in the following year, and became Bishop of Salona. Glycerius died in the year of Rome 1233 (A. D. 480)].

JUSTINUS.

[Justinus was born a peasant, at Bederiana, in Thacia, in the year of Rome 1203 (A. D. 450). He was Praetorian praefect in the reign of Anastasius; upon whose death he was raised to the empire, in 1271 (A. D. 518). This emperor died in the year of Rome 1280,
(A. D. 527)].

There are no coins of Euphemia. Ducange and Banduri have erroneously attributed to her the coins of Euphemia, wife of Athemius.

VITALIANUS.

[Vitalianus, the nephew of Aspar, was master of the militia, under Anastasius, and in the year of Rome 1267 (A. D. 514), was elected emperor by the people of Constantinople. Anastasius, however, prevailed upon Vitalianus to retire. Justinus recalled him to court upon the death of Anastasius, and honoured him with the consulate, in the year of Rome 1273 (A. D. 520); but he was assassinated in the seventh month of his office, at the instigation of Justinianus, nephew of Justinus].

GOTHIC KINGS.

THEODORICUS.

[The character of Theodoricus has been minutely drawn by Gibbon. He assisted in deposing Basiliscus, and gained the esteem and confidence of the emperor Zeno, in the year of Rome 1230 (A. D. 477). Having obtained from that prince permission to invade Italy and expel Odoacer, he accordingly entered that country, in 1242 (A. D. 489). Odoacer was worsted in several engagements, and having at length been subdued, a treaty of friendship was made between the conqueror and the conquered, but Odoacer was basely assassinated at a banquet. Theodoricus ended his eventful life at Ravenna, in the year of Rome 1279 (A. D. 526)].

opinion that Theia and Theias are the same persons, and that it is the same with Baduela and Baduila.

VANDAL KINGS.

THE history of this barbarous people, and their encroachments upon the more civilized nations of Europe, has been given by Gibbon. The names of several of their kings are recorded in history; but the first of whom we have coins, is

GUNTHAMUNDUS.

THEODEBERTUS.

[The coins of Theodebertus belong to the suite of Merovingian monarchs, but as they bear the title of Augustus,* having probably been struck when this king invaded Italy, they are ranged with those of the emperors. Theodebertus was born in the year A. D. 534, and died of a hurt received in combat with a wild bull while hunting, when about to invade Thrace, A. D. 548. Some of the French historians say he died of a fever].

MAURICIUS.

[Mauricius Tiberius, son-in-law of Tiberius Constantinus, was born at Arabissus, in Cappadocia, of a family originally of Rome, in the year of that city 1292 (A. D. 539). Mauricius at first followed the profession of a notary, but, quitting it for a military life, he became general of the army sent against the Persians by Tiberius, by whom he was declared Caesar and Augustus, in 1335 (A. D. 582), and whose daughter, Constantina, he married. This emperor was, with his wife and family, most barbarously murdered by the usurper Phocas, who had been invested with the purple by the soldiers, in the year of Rome 1355 (A. D. 602)].

The last legend appears on a brass coin of this emperor, bearing, on the obverse, two figures standing, which Mionnet supposes to be those of Mauricius and his consort; and another figure, on the reverse, to be Theodosius, their son, who was created Augustus by his father. This writer is of opinion that the double AVG. refers to the emperor and empress, and not to the figure on the reverse.

He was centurion in the army of the Eastern empire, when the soldiers revolted in his favour, and placed him on the throne, in the year of Rome 1355 (A. D. 602). The usurper caused the deposed emperor Mauricius and the whole of his family to be murdered. Phocas was besieged in Constantinople by Heraclius, son of Heraclius the governor of Africa, and being obliged to surrender, his head was struck from his body, in the year of Rome 1363 (A. D. 610)].

The legend with the name of FLAVIVS, was first published by Ducange, and afterwards by Banduri, who, however, never saw the coin. Medio-barba has also given coins of Phocas with the name of Flavius, but they are considered dubious. The last legend with NEP. or NEPE. is found on those coins only which present us with the effigies of Phocas and his wife, but her name was Leontia, and this contracted word requires explanation. Banduri is of opinion that the letters ΦK. on the silver quinarii of Phocas furnish the abbreviation of his name, and that it is the same with the coins of Heraclius, which bear HK. ; but as the letters CN. occur on the money of Justinianus the First, this opinion is not conclusive.

Upon the death of her husband, she took off her son-in-law Heraclius Constantinus by poison in 1394 (A. D. 641), and assumed the reigns of government, associating her son Heracleonus in the empire, in which her other son Tiberius, and Constans son of Heraclius Constantinus, had a share. The career of this bold woman was, at length, checked by the senate, who caused her tongue to be torn out, and banished her to Cappadocia in the same year].

There are no coins of this empress; but the Baron Marchant, who has devoted much time and talent to the study of the coins of this period, supposes that she is represented on some coins, with her husband and her son Heraclius Constantinus.

GREGORIA.

{Gregoria, daughter of Nicetas a Patrician, and wife of the second Heraclius, was married to the emperor in the year of Rome 1381, (A. D. 628)}.

See the coins of Heraclius the Second.

HERACLEONAS.

[Heracleonas, son of Heraclius the First and Martina, was born at Colchis, in the year of Rome 1379 (A. D. 626), and declared Caesar by his father, in 1384 (A. D. 631). He received the title of Augustus shortly afterwards, and succeeded his father with his brother Heraclius Constantinus, in 1394 (A. D. 641). Heraclius having been poisoned by his mother-in law shortly afterwards, this prince remained sole emperor, but in the same year Heracleonas was dethroned by the senate, his nose was cut off, and he was condemned to exile in Cappadocia].

See the coins of Heraclius the Second.

TIBERIUS.

[Tiberius, the brother of Heracleonas, was created Caesar by Heraclius the First, in the year of Rome 1393 (A. D. 640), and in the following year succeeded to the empire, which he shared with his brother Heracleonas. The death of Tiberius probably happened soon after, but is not mentioned by the Byzantine historians].

There are no coins of Tiberius.

CONSTANS II.

[Constans, the son of Heraclius the Second and Gregoria, was born at ———, in the year of Rome 1383, (A. D. 630); and in 1394 (A. D. 641), received, with his uncles Tiberius and Heracleonas, the title of Augustus. The deposition of Heracleonas shortly after, and the death of Tiberius, left him sole possessor of the throne. Constans was assassinated in a bath at Syracuse, in the year of Rome 1421 (A. D. 668)].

CONSTANTINUS IV.

[Constantinus, surnamed Pogonatus,* the son of Constans the Second, was born in the year of Rome, —. In 1407 (A. D. 654),

* According to Zonarus, the surname of Pogonatus (bearded) was given to this prince from the following circumstances:— When Constantinus IV. quitted Constantinople for Sicily, with his father, he had but a youthful beard, and that on his return after the death of his father it was long and ample. By other writers, however, it does not appear that Constantinus accompanied his father to Sicily. Besides, the effigy on the coins of Constans the Second, has a very large beard, while that of his son Constantinus is short and youthful; so that the surname, as Mionnet observes, may with more propriety have been given to the father of this prince.

he was associated with his father in the empire; and in 1421 (A. D. 668), he succeeded that prince. Constantinus IV. died in the year of Rome 1438 (A. D. 685)].

D. 682), and the death of his father three years after, left him sole possessor of the empire. His monstrous cruelty roused the fury of the people, who, headed by Leontius the Patrician, seized him in his palace, and after burning alive his ministers, cut off the nose of the tyrant, and exiled him to Chersonesus, in 1448 (A. D. 695). He obtained from this circumstance, the name of Rhinotmetus. By the aid of the Bulgarians, he was replaced on the throne, in 1458 (A. D. 705), but was again deposed, and put to death by Bardanes, in the year of Rome 1464 (A. D. 711).

The last two legends are found on some of the coins of Leo. IV., of whom Constantinus Copronymus was the father, and Leo. III. grandfather. Hence the name of PAPPVS (signifying in Greek, grandfather) given to Leo.

IRENE.

[Irene, daughter of a Khan of the Chozars, and wife of Constantinus Copronymus, was married to the emperor in the year of Rome 1486 (A. D. 733). She died shortly after the birth of Leo IV. in 1503 (A. D. 750)].

No coins are known of this princess.

MARIA.

[Maria, the second wife of Copronymus, was married to the emperor in the year of Rome 1503 (A. D. 750), and died shortly afterwards].

No coins.

EUDOCIA.

[Eudocia was the third wife of Copronymus. The time of the marriage of this lady to the emperor is not known. She gave birth to several children, two of whom, Christophorus and Nicephorus, were created Caesars, in the year of Rome 1522 (A. D. 769). The time of her death is not known].

There are no certain coins of this lady. See, however, the third letter of the Baron Marchant.

ARTAVASDUS.

[Artavasdus was son-in-law of Leo III., under whom he held the posts of master of the palace and governor of Armenia. He revolted against Constantinus Copronymus, who fled from the throne, of which Artavasdus took possession, in the year of Rome 1495 (A. D. 742). The deposed emperor, however, succeeded in subduing the usurper in the following year; and Artavasdus, after having his eyes put out, was sent into exile].

NICEPHORUS.

[Nicephorus, son of Artavasdus and Anna, the sister of Constantinus the Fifth, was created Augustus, and associated with his father, who usurped the throne in 1495 (A. D. 742). He shared the same fate as his parent, in the following year].

See the coins described under Artavasdus.

CHRISTOPHORUS AND NICEPHORUS.

[Christophorus and Nicephorus, the sons of Constantinus the Fifth and Eudocia, were declared Caesars by their father, in the year of Rome 1522 (A. D. 769). They were mutilated and banished to Athens by Constantinus the Sixth, in 1545 (A. D. 792), and in 1550 (A. D. 797) were put to death by order of Irene, the mother of that prince].

No coins are known of these princes, but the Baron Marchant assigns to them some coins without legends. See his Mélanges de Numismatique et d'Histoire, lettre iii.

LEO IV.

[Leo, son of Constantinus Copronymus and Irene, bore the surname of Chazarus, because his mother was the daughter of a Khan of the Chozars. He was born at Constantinople, in the year of Rome 1503 (A. The foregoing types in small brass, are given by Sestini. The Arabic legend gives the name of Leo, and explains that the coins were struck at Damas (Damascus), in Syria, which was taken by this emperor, in his war with the Saracens. The Baron Marchant thinks these coins belong to Leontius the Second, but Sestini assigns them to Leo IV.

IRENE.

[Irene, wife of Leo IV., surnamed Attica, from the country of her birth, was married to the emperor in the year of Rome 1522 (A. D. 769). Upon the death of Leo IV., in 1533 (A. D. 780), she caused herself to be proclaimed Augusta, and ruled the empire in the name of her son Constantinus, who, in 1543 (A. D. 790), removed her from the government. She was recalled, however, in the following year; and, in 1550 (A. D. 797), Constantinus, by her command, was deprived of his eyes, and Irene governed alone, until the year 1555 (A. D. 802), when she was deposed by Nicephorus Logotheta, and banished to the island of Lesbos, where she maintained herself by spinning. This barbarous woman ended her life, in the year of Rome 1556 (A. D. 803)].

The Baron Marchant, in his "Melanges de Numismatique, &c.," has given a coin somewhat similar, in small brass; but expresses his doubts as to its appropriation to Constantinus VI., and supposes it to belong to Constantinus V. THEOPHILUS.

[Theophilus, son of Michael the Second and Thecla, was probably born at Armorium in Phrygia. He received from his father the title of Augustus, in the year of Rome 1574 (A. D. 821), and succeeded him in 1582 (A. D. 829). Theophilus died in 1595 (A. D. 842)].

If, says Mionnet, this coin be authentic, it does not present us with a bust of the Constantinus, supposed to be the son of Michael the Third, since this prince was not born during the lifetime of Theophilus, and it is not probable that Michael III. would strike coins for his son, without placing his own effigy and name on them. It can only be accounted for, by supposing that Theophilus had also a son, whom history does not mention.

THEODORA.

[Theodora, wife of Theophilus, was the daughter of a Tribune, and born at Ebissa, in Paphlagonia. She was married to the emperor, in the year of Rome 1583 (A. D. 830). Upon the death of Theophilus, in 1595 (A. D. 842), she governed the empire during the minority of Michael, who, in the year 1610 (A. D. 857), shut her up in a monastery, where she ended her life].

MICHAEL III.

[Michael, the son of Theophilus and Theodora, was born in the year of Rome 1589 (A. D. 836), and created Augustus by his father immediately after. He succeeded Theophilus in 1595 (A. D. 842), and compelled his mother to embrace a religious life in 1610 (A. D. 857). Michael was assassinated in 1620 (A. D. 867), by Basilius, whom he had admitted as an associate in the empire in the preceding year].

CONSTANTINUS.

This prince is not mentioned by historians. The coins described at page 449, have been ascribed to Constantinus, the supposed brother of Michael III.; but the Baron Marchant is of opinion that this Constantinus was a son of that emperor. Mionnet (tom. ii, p. 480), has a long note on the subject of this new attribution, the substance of which is as follows:—Those coins upon which there are two busts, or one only with the legend MIXAHL. S. CONSTANTIN. have raised doubts in the minds of some numismatists, whether these two effigies are those of the two sons of Theophilus, who is represented and named on the other side of these same coins. In the first place, because Michael is portrayed with a beard, whereas he was only five or six years old at the time of his father's death; and in the next, because history does not mention that Theophilus had a son named Constantinus. Some have supposed that the bust on these coins must be that of Michael II., who had received, as his associate in the empire, Constantinus, son of Leo.V., and on the other side that of his own son Theophilus; but it is not probable that Michael II. should receive as his partner in the empire the son of Leo the Armenian, whom he had mutilated and exiled, upon ascending the throne. This opinion being unsupported, and, indeed, discredited, by the recital of historians, the former one has been held by many antiquaries; namely, that Constantinus and Michael were the sons of Theophilus. It appears, however, that there is good reason for supposing that Michael the Third had a son named Constantinus. The Baron Marchant was the first to solve this difficulty.* He discovered in Ducange, who quotes from Leo the grammarian, that it is probable Michael had a son by his wife Eudoxia; and that this prince died very young, at the commencement of the reign of Basilius. It therefore becomes almost a certainty that the two busts are those of Michael III. and his infant son Constantinus, whom he might have taken as his colleague; and that the bearded single portrait is that of his father Theophilus, placed as a memento on the reverse.

(See the coins of Michael the Third).

THECLA.

[Thecla, daughter of Theophilus and Theodora, and sister of Michael the Third, was driven from the imperial palace by Michael, and shut up in a convent with her mother, in the year of Rome 1610 (A. D. 857)].

See the coins of Theodora and Michael III.

* See his Melanges de Numismatique et d'Histoire, Letter xiv., addressed to the Baron Rühle de Lilienstern.

BASILIUS I.

[Basilius was born of an obscure Thracian family, at Hadrionopolis, in the year of Rome — Michael the Third adopted and admitted him to a share in the empire, in 1619 (A. D. 866), but he caused Michael to be murdered in the following year. Basilius died in 1639 (A. D. 886)].

It is most likely, observes Mionnet, that this coin bears the effigies of Leo VI. and Alexander, instead of those of Constantinus VIII. and Leo. Constantinus being the eldest son of Basilius, would have been mentioned first in the legend, if in company with his brother; but on this coin, Leo is mentioned first. Mionnet thinks this coin was struck after the death of Constantinus, who died young, and before his father.

The coins in brass, on which Constantinus and his brother Leo are associated with their father, are common.

CONSTANTINUS VIII.

He was general of the army of Constantinus X., by whom he was created Augustus, and associated in the empire, when Constantinus married his daughter Helena, in the year of Rome 1672 (A. D. 919). Romanus, in the following year, raised his son Christophorus to the dignity of emperor, when they seized the first and second place in the empire, compelling Constantinus to hold the third. This ambitious man was driven from the throne by his son Stephanus, whom he had taken as his associate after the death of Christophorus, in 1697 (A. D. 944). THEOPHANO.

[Theophano, the second wife of Romanus II., was born of an obscure family, in the year of Rome— She was married to the emperor, in 1712 (A. D. 959); upon whose death, in 1716 (A. D. 963), she was nominated Regent during the minority of her sons, Basilus and Constantinus, when she gave her hand to Nicephorus Phocas, who had been proclaimed emperor by the army of the East. Theophano contrived the death of Nicephorus, in 1722 (A. D. 969), when the murderer, Johannes Zimisces, possessed himself of the throne, and banished her to the island of Prote. She was, however, recalled by her sons, who had regained the throne, after the death of Zimisces, in 1728 (A. D. 975). The time of her death is not known].

NICEPHORUS II.

[Nicephorus was born of an illustrious family of Constantinople, about the year of Rome 1665 (A. D. 912). He was proclaimed emperor by the army in Asia, of which he was general, after the death of Romanus, in the year 1716 (A. D. 963), and was murdered, at the command of his wife Theophano, by Johannes Zimisces, who usurped the throne in 1722 (A. D. 969)].

He ascended the throne of Constantinople, after having murdered Nicephorus Focas, in the year of Rome 1722 (A. D. 969). Zimisce is supposed to have died of poison, in the year 1728 (A. D. 975). This usurper has been eulogised by Gibbon; but the murder of Nicephorus, and his treatment of the woman to whom he was indebted for his elevation, represent Zimisce in a very odious light].

We are informed by the historians, that the coins which bear on the obverse the effigy of Christ in the place of that of the emperor; and on the reverse, the legend, Jesus Christ, King of kings, were first struck during the reign of this emperor. This is confirmed by the appearance of the coins themselves, but it is doubtful whether some of those described below do not belong to other emperors. Many of the brass coins with the types in question are very common, and are therefore not noticed here.

BASILIUS II.

[Basilus, son of Romanus the Second and Theophano, was born about the year of Rome 1709 (A. D. 956); and when four years of age, was created Augustus by his father, a title which he held during the reigns of Nicephorus and Johannes Zimisces, succeeding the latter in 1728 (A. D. 975). This prince died in 1778 (A. D. 1025)].

Mionnet justly observes, that the supposed coins of Basilus II., with his name only, may with equal propriety be assigned to Basilus I. The coins upon which the names of Basilus II. and Constantine XI. occur, are also uncertain; as Basilus I., and his son Constantine, were also associated. Those, however, upon which the princes have each the surname of Porphyrogenitus, belong exclusively to Basilus II. and Constantine XI.

This medallion is described by Tanini (page 428), who assigns it to Constantine XI. from the circumstance of its being concave, a description of coin not in use until this period. This author observes that the first mention of nummi scyphati, or cup-shaped coins, occurs in an instrument of the year A. D. 1024, quoted by Ughelli, at which time Constantine and his brother Basilius were associated.

ROMANUS III.

[Romanus, surnamed Argyrus, was born about the year of Rome 1726 (A. D. 973), and was raised to the throne by his marriage with Zoe, daughter of Constantine XI., whom he espoused a few days before the death of that emperor, in the year 1781 (A. D. 1028). Romanus was poisoned and suffocated in a bath by command of his wife, who raised to the empire Michael Paphlago, in 1787 (A. D. 1034)].

No certain coins are known of this prince. The Baron Marchant has, nevertheless, attributed a coin to Romanus III.—Mélanges, Lettre ii.

MICHAEL IV.

[Michael, surnamed Paphlago from the country of his birth, was born of obscure parents. He was raised to the empire by Zoe, whom he married, in 1787 (A. D. 1034). Michael died in a monastery, in the year 1794 (A. D. 1041)].

The Baron Marchant attributes to Michael IV. some coins which have been assigned to the first emperor of this name. No others are known.

MICHAEL V.

[Michael, surnamed Calaphates, son of Maria, sister of Michael Paphlago, was adopted by the infamous Zoe, after the abdication of his uncle, in the year of Rōme 1794 (A. D. 1041); but was shortly banished, and eventually shut up in a monastery, by the empress, after being deprived of sight. He died soon afterwards].

No certain coins. The Baron Marchant thinks otherwise, and assigns to this Michael, coins which have hitherto been supposed to belong to Michael the First. (Mélanges, Lett. ix.)

CONSTANTINUS XII.

[Constantinus, surnamed Monamachus (the single combatant), was born of a noble family of Constantinople, and raised to the throne by Zoe, who married him, in 1795 (A. D. 1042). This emperor died in 1807 (A. D. 1054)].

STYLE:—CΩNSTANT. (or CΩNSTANTIN.) BASILE. (or BASILEVS.) RΩ. (or RΩM.)—EVSEBHS. MONOMAXOS.

It should be borne in mind that only those coins which bear the surname of Monomachus, belong, without doubt, to this emperor. Those which are without this distinction, may possibly belong to another emperor of the same name.

ZOE.

[Zoe, daughter of Constantinus XI. and Helena, was born in the year of Rome 1731 (A. D. 798). Having caused the death of her first husband, the emperor Romanus III., in 1787 (A. D. 1034), she married Michael Paphlago, who embraced a monastic life, in 1794 (A. D. 1041). Zoe then adopted her nephew, Michael Calaphates, who shortly afterwards sent her into banishment. Michael was, however, driven from the throne in the following year by his aunt, by whose orders he was deprived of his eyes; when Zoe caused herself to be proclaimed empress, with her sister Theodora, having first married Constantinus Monomachus, whom she raised to the purple, 1795 (A. D. 1042). This ambitious woman died in the year of Rome 1803 (A. D. 1050)].

Banduri quotes coins of Zoe from Ducange and Strada, but none are known at this time.

THEODORA.

[Theodora, sister of Zoe, was born in the year of Rome 1734 (A. D. 981). She was driven from the throne, and shut up in a monastery, by her brother-in-law Romanus Argyrus, but was released by Zoe, as above related, in 1795 (A. D. 1042). She succeeded Constantinus Monomachus, in 1807 (A. D. 1054), having borne the title of Augusta during the reign of that prince. Theodora died in the year of Rome 1809 (A. D. 1056)].

MICHAEL VI.

[Michael, surnamed Stratioticus, was of noble birth, and designed by Theodora as her successor. He was acknowledged emperor after the death of that empress, in the year of Rome 1809 (A. D. 1056). His troops, however, rebelled against him, and having chosen Isaacius Comnenus for emperor, Michael was compelled to abdicate, and retired to a monastery, in which he died, in the year 1812 (A. D. 1059)].

There are no certain coins of this prince; but the Baron Marchant (Mélanges, Lettre ix.), is of opinion that those which bear the effigies of an emperor and an empress, with the legend ΜΙΧΑΗΛ. Σ. ΜΑΡΙΑ. belong to him. This very zealous numismatist observes, that the male figure on these coins has a beard, and the countenance of a man of advanced age, which attributes cannot belong to Michael VII. He is also of opinion, that the silence of historians respecting the wife of Michael the Sixth ought not to be considered sufficient to discredit this new attribution. This writer gives to Michael VII. those coins only which are described by Banduri from Ducange, tom. ii, p. 751. On these the prince is without beard, and has a youthful countenance.

ISAACIUS I.

[Isaacijs, surnamed Comnenus, was praefect of the East under Theodora, when he was proclaimed emperor by the soldiers, who compelled Michael Stratoticus to abdicate, in the year of Rome 1810 (A.D. 1057). This prince, enfeebled by age, voluntarily abdicated the throne and retired to a monastery, in 1812 (A. D. 1059), having nominated Constantinus Ducas as his successor. Isaacijs died in the year of Rome 1814 (A. D. 1061)].

EUDOCIA.

[Eudocia Dalassena, daughter of Constantinus Dalassenus, was wife of Constantinus Ducas, upon whose death, in the year of Rome 1820, (A. D. 1067), she assumed the reins of government, and ruled the empire in the names of her sons, Michael, Constantinus, and Andronicus. In 1821 (A. D. 1068), she married Romanus Diogenes, upon whom she conferred the title of emperor, leaving that of Augustus to her children, who, however, were associated with their father-in-law. Eudocia, after the death of Romanus, was driven from the throne, and shut up in a monastery, in the year of Rome 1824 (A. D. 1071). She died about the year 1849 (A. D. 1096).

The Baron Marchant is of opinion that this coin may bear the effigy of Constantinus, son of Michael VII. and Maria, and grandson of Eudocia; and thinks that it is the same with the gold medallion. Mionnet, however, controverts this opinion; and observes, that when the son of Michael was born, Eudocia did not hold the imperial dignity, having been deprived of her rank and shut up in a monastery three years previously.

ROMANUS IV.

[Romanus Diogenes, son of Constantinus Diogenes, held a military command under Constantinus Ducas, and was raised to the throne by Eudocia, widow of that emperor, who gave him her hand, in the year of Rome 1821 (A. D. 1068). This unfortunate prince was captured by the Turks in 1824 (A. D. 1071); but being set at liberty in the same year, he returned to resume the government of the empire, when he was inhumanly deprived of sight, and immured in a monastery, where he died, shortly after, from the effects of his wounds].

(Marchant, Lettre iv).

The Baron Marchant attributes to this prince several coins in small brass, which by Ducange are placed among the incerti of John Zimisces.

MICHAEL VII.

[Michael, surnamed Ducas, son of Constantinus XIII. and Eudocia, was created Augustus by his father, whom he succeeded, and was associated with his brothers Constantinus and Andronicus, subject to the authority of Eudocia, in the year of Rome 1820 (A.D. 1067). In the following year, the empress married Romanus Diogenes, whom she raised to the empire, when Michael was associated with his father-in-law. The captivity of Romanus left Michael master of the empire, and that unfortunate prince, upon his return, was mutilated, and shut up in a monastery, 1824 (A.D. 1071). Michael was deposed by Nicephorus Botoniaties; and, embracing a religious life, was shortly after consecrated Archbishop of Ephesus. This prince died in the reign of Alexius Comnenus].

MARIA.

[Maria, an Iberian princess, and wife of the emperor Michael VII., was shut up with her fifth husband in a monastery, in the year of Rome 1831 (A. D. 1078). She, however, came forth from her captivity shortly after, and remounting the throne, married Nicephorus Botoniates, although Michael was still living. Her second husband was deposed by Alexius Comnenus, in 1834 (A. D. 1081), when Maria re-entered her monastery, where she ended her life].

CONSTANTINUS.

(SON OF CONSTANTINUS XIII).

[This prince was declared Augustus, with his brother Michael, and succeeded with him to the empire after the death of Constantinus XIII., under the control of their mother Eudocia, in the year of Rome 1820 (A. D. 1067). He abdicated the throne in 1831 (A. D. 1078), and was soon after made præfect of the East, by Nicephorus Botoniates. This prince was slain in a battle with Robert Guichard, Duke of Pouille, in the reign of Alexis Comnenes, in 1835 (A. D. 1082)].

(See the coins of Romanus Diogenes, and those of Eudocia).

ANDRONICUS.

[Andronicus, third son of Constantinus XIII. and Eudocia, died, as is supposed, at an early age, having borne with his brothers the rank of Augustus].

See the coins of Romanus IV.

CONSTANTINUS

(SON OF MICHAEL VII. AND MARIA).

[This prince was born at Constantinople, in the year of Rome 1827 (A. D. 1074), and shortly after was created Augustus by his father. In 1831 (A. D. 1078), he was deprived of his title by Nicephorus Botaniates, and shut up in a monastery; but, upon the deposition of the usurper by Alexius Comnenus, Constantinus was recalled to the court, and received anew the title of Augustus. Constantinus died in the reign of Alexius I.]

No coins are known of this prince; but the Baron Marchant is of opinion that his effigy occurs on the coins of Eudocia Dalassena.

NICEPHORUS III.

[Nicephorus, surnamed Botaniates, is supposed to have been the son of the praefect of Thessalonica. In the reign of Michael Ducas, he commanded the army of Asia, by which he was proclaimed emperor, when, assisted by the Turks, he possessed himself of the throne, and deposed Michael, in the year of Rome 1831 (A. D. 1078). Nicephorus was, in his turn, dethroned by Alexius Comnenus, in the year 1834 (A. D. 1081), when he retired to a monastery].

ALEXIUS II.

[Alexius, son of Manuel the First and Maria, was born in the year of Rome 1920 (A. D. 1167); or, according to some authors, two years later. When two years of age, he was created Augustus by his father, whom he succeeded, in 1933 (A. D. 1180), but under the regency of his mother. This prince was strangled at the command of his cousin Andronicus Comnenus, who usurped the regency; and his mother Maria having shortly afterwards shared the same fate, Andronicus possessed himself of the throne, in 1936 (A. D. 1183)].

STYLE :—ΑΛΕΧΙVΣ.—ALE. (or ΑΛΕΖ.) O. ΚΟΜΝ.

The silver coins described below were not known to Eckhel. They have been published by the Conservator of the Imperial Cabinet of Russia,* and from the circumstance of their bearing the figure of St. Eugenius, which appears for the first time on the money of Johannes the Second, are assigned to the Second Alexius. Hitherto the coins of the three emperors of this name were confounded, and there are now several which cannot be distinguished. The gold concave medallion must belong to this emperor, because it bears the name and effigy of Andronicus, who had usurped the regency of the empire.

ANDRONICUS I.

[Andronicus, son of Isaacius Comnenus, the brother of Johannes II., was general of the army in the reigns of Manuel and Alexius II. He possessed himself of the throne, after the murder of Alexius, in the year of Rome 1936 (A. D. 1183), having first obtained the regency, by the murder of the empress Maria. This cruel usurper was deposed by Isaac Angelus, whom he had doomed to death; and being delivered into the hands of the populace, was executed with great barbarity, in 1938 (A. D. 1185)].

ISAACIUS II.

[Isaacius, son of Andronicus Angelus, was raised from the scaffold to the empire by the populace, in the year of Rome 1938 (A. D. 1185). In the year 1948 (A. D. 1195), he was deposed by his brother, Alexius Angelus, who shut him up in prison, after depriving him of his eyes. He was, however, replaced on the throne by the Crusaders, who took Constantinople, in 1956 (A. D. 1203), and associated with his son Alexius IV. This unfortunate prince died in the following year, after the murder of his son by Alexius Murzuphlus, who usurped the throne].

ALEXIUS. IV.

[Alexius, son of Isaacius II., was crowned emperor and associated with his father, who had been replaced on the throne, by the Crusaders, in the year of Rome 1956 (A. D. 1203). This prince was strangled, by order of the usurper Alexius Murzuphlus, in the year of Rome 1957, (A. D. 1204)].

No certain coins.

ALEXIUS V.

[Alexius Murzuphlus, was master of the wardrobe, in the reign of Isaacius Angelus and Alexius, his son. He usurped the throne, in 1957 (A. D. 1204), and caused the latter to be strangled; but in the same year was obliged to fly for safety from the scene of his cruelties. He was captured by the Crusaders, who had possessed themselves of Rome for the second time, and condemned to be cast from the Theodosian column. A new empire was now established for some years at Constantinople].

No certain coins are known of this usurper.

FRENCH EMPERORS AT CONSTANTINOPLE.

BALDUINUS I.

[Baldwin, son of Baldwin VIII., Count of Flanders, and Margaret of Alsace, was elected emperor by the Crusaders of Venice and France, who had possessed themselves not only of Constantinople, but also of the whole empire of the Greeks in Europe, in the year of Rome 1957 (A. D. 1204). This prince was defeated by the Bulgarians, who kept him for some months in close captivity, and finally put him to death, in the year of Rome 1959 (A. D. 1206)].

PETRUS.

[Peter de Courtenai, Count of Auxerre, and husband of Iolande, sister of the preceding emperors, was elected emperor of Constantinople upon the death of Henry, in the year of Rome 1969 (A. D. 1216). He caused himself to be crowned at Rome by Pope Honorius III.; but, upon his return, was taken prisoner by Theodorus Angelus, Prince of Epirus, and died in captivity, not without suspicion of having been assassinated by command of that prince, in the year of Rome 1971 (A. D. 1218). During his captivity, Iolande held the reins of government].

No coins are known of this emperor.

ROBERTUS.

[Robert, son of Peter de Courtenai and Iolande, was crowned emperor of Constantinople, after the throne had been for some time vacant, and the government administered by the regent, Conon de Bethune, in the year of Rome 1974 (A. D. 1221). Robert died in 1981 (A. D. 1228)].

No coins are known of Robertus.

BALDUINUS II.

[Baldwin, brother of Robert de Courtenai, was elected emperor, after the death of the preceding, in the year of Rome 1981 (A. D. 1228). Baldwin was dethroned by Michael Paleologos, who retook Constantinople from the French, in 2014 (A. D. 1261), and retired into Italy, in which country he died, in the year of Rome 2025 (A. D. 1272)].

No coins are known of this emperor.

THEODORUS I.

[Theodorus, husband of Anna Comnena, the daughter of Alexius III., was born in the year of Rome 1929 (A. D. 1176). He retired into Asia upon the taking of Constantinople by the Crusaders, and having possessed himself of Bithynia and some other provinces, he caused himself to be proclaimed Emperor of the East at Nicæa, where he established his court, in the year 1958 (A. D. 1205). This prince died in 1975 (A. D. 1222)].

“Three princes of the name of Theodorus,” says Mionnet, “reigned at Thessalonica and at Nicæa, during the occupation of Constantinople by the Crusaders; and it is difficult to say to which of these princes belong the coins which bear their name.” This author prefers placing them to the reign of the second Theodorus.

THEODORUS II.

[Theodorus, the son of Johannes Angelus, held possession of a part of Epirus and other provinces, after the death of his brother Michael, who had formed a state, after the taking of Constantinople by the Crusaders. He took the title of emperor, and caused himself to be crowned, at Thessalonica in Macedonia, in the year of Rome 1976 (A. D. 1223). In 1983 (A. D. 1230) he was defeated and made prisoner, by Azan, king of the Bulgarians. This barbarian caused the captive emperor to be deprived of sight; but Theodorus shortly after regaining his liberty, returned to Thessalonica, when he found that his brother Manuel had usurped the sovereignty. Manuel was driven from the throne, when Theodorus renounced in favour of his son Johannes, who was soon deposed by Johannes Vatatzes].

The full-faced bust of Saint George, with coat of mail, and the nimbus encircling the head, holding in the right hand a spear.

Banduri and Ducange give a coin with a similar type to the above; but instead of IΩ, a contraction, thus, $\overline{\omega}$. These writers are of opinion that a K preceded this contracted word, and therefore assign the coin to Constantinus XIII. (Ducas). The Baron Marchant, however, thinks otherwise, and remarks that there is no room for another letter, and supposing the horizontal line to be intended for an iota, attributes this piece to Johannes Vatzzes. A coin quoted by Mionnet, in the cabinet of the French king, warrants this new attribution.

THEODORUS III.

[Theodorus, son of Johannes Vatzzes and Helena, daughter of Theodorus I., was born in the year of Rome 1976 (A. D. 1223). He succeeded his father at Nicæa, in 2008 (A. D. 1255), and died in the year 2012 (A. D. 1259)].

MICHAEL VIII.

[Michael, son of Andronicus Paleologos, usurped the regency of the empire established at Nicæa, after having murdered Muzalo, the guardian of the young prince Johannes IV., with whom he associated himself, but whom he shortly after banished to Bithynia, about the year of Rome 2012 (A. D. 1259). He retook from the French the city of Constantinople, in which he re-established the seat of the Greek empire, in 2014 (A. D. 1261). This usurper died in 2035 (A. D. 1282)].

[Andronicus, son of Michael IX. and Maria Armenia, was born about the year of Rome 2048 (A. D. 1295). He was associated with his grandfather in 2078 (A. D. 1325), whom he deposed in 2081 (A. D. 1328). Andronicus the Third died in the year of Rome 2094 (A. D. 1341)].

If any coins exist of this prince, they are confounded with those of the second Andronicus.

JOHANNES V.

[Johannes, son of Andronicus III. and Anna of Savoy, was born at Didimotichos in Thrace, in the year of Rome 2085 (A. D. 1332). In 2094 (A. D. 1341) he succeeded to the empire, under the tuition of his mother and the guardianship of Johannes Cantacuzenus, whom he was compelled to receive as his colleague in the empire, in 2100 (A. D. 1347). Cantacuzenus was forced, after some contention, to renounce the throne, in 2108 (A. D. 1355). Johannes being deposed by his son Andronicus, who shut up his father and his brother Manuel in prison, in 2124 (A. D. 1371), was restored to the throne, with the assistance of the Sultan Bajazet, in 2126 (A. D. 1373), and died in the year of Rome 2144 (A. D. 1391)].

No coins are known of Johannes V.

JOHANNES VI.

[Johannes, surnamed Cantacuzenus, was descended from a noble family, and held the office of grand master of the palace under Andronicus III.; and upon the death of that prince, was left guardian of his son Johannes V., in conjunction with the empress Anna, in the year of Rome 2094 (A. D. 1341). A dispute arising between the two guardians, Cantacuzenus caused himself to be proclaimed emperor in the same year, and compelled the young prince to receive him as his colleague in the empire, in 2100 (A. D. 1347). The usurper, however, was forced to relinquish the throne, in the year of Rome 2108 (A. D. 1355), and retired to a monastery, in which he ended his life].

The Baron Marchant, in commenting on this coin (or seal?), observes that it is not likely that an emperor would use the title of Σεβαστος, in conjunction with the inferior qualification of Δομestιχος. This writer is of opinion, that Σεβαστος is put for Σεβαστοκρατωρ; and that the coin, or seal, in question, belongs to some prince who was not emperor; perhaps to Johannes Paleologos, brother of Michael VIII.

MATTHAEUS.

[Matthaeus, son of Johannes VI. and Irene, was created emperor by his father, during the contention between the latter and Johannes Paleologos, his colleague, in the year of Rome 2107 (A. D. 1354), and crowned in the following year, after their reconciliation. Upon the abdication of his father, Matthaeus would have maintained his rank by force of arms, but being defeated and made prisoner, he was only restored to liberty upon his agreeing to retire to private life, in 2109 (A. D. 1356). He was allowed, nevertheless, to bear the empty title of despot].

No coins are known of this prince.

ANDRONICUS IV.

[Andronicus, surnamed Paleologos, son of Johannes V. and Helena Cantacuzenus, was associated in the empire with his father, as is supposed, after the abdication of Cantacuzenus and his son. This prince deposed his father, whom, with his brother Manuel, he imprisoned, in the year of Rome 2124 (A. D. 1371). His father having been restored to the throne by the Sultan Bajazet, in 2126 (A. D. 1373), Andronicus abdicated in favour of his brother Manuel, and retired into Thrace, where he died].

No coins of this prince are known.

MANUEL II.

[Manuel, son of Andronicus IV., was born in the year of Rome 2101 (A. D. 1348). Declared emperor in 2126 (A. D. 1373), his brother Matthaeus having renounced in his favour. This prince succeeded his father in 2144 (A. D. 1391), and died in 2178 (A. D. 1425)].

No coins of Manuel II. are known.

JOHANNES VII.

[Johannes, son of Andronicus IV. was created emperor by his uncle Manuel, in the year of Rome 2152 (A. D. 1399), but was compelled to abdicate the throne in 2155 (A. D. 1402) by Manuel, who banished him to the Island of Lemnos. He subsequently obtained the sovereignty of Thessalonica. This prince ended his life in a monastery].

No coins are known.

JOHANNES VIII.

[Johannes, son of Manuel II. and Irene, daughter of Constantinus Dragases, was born in the year of Rome 2143 (A. D. 1390); created Augustus in 2172 (A. D. 1419); succeeded his father in 2178 (A. D. 1425), and died in 2201 (A. D. 1448)].

A large gold medallion of this prince has been quoted by old writers, but its authenticity is doubted. It is thus described:—

This medallion is engraved in Tanini's Supp. to Banduri.

CONSTANTINUS XIV.

[Constantinus Paleologos, the fourteenth emperor of that name, was the brother of Johannes VIII. He was born in the year of Rome 2156 (A. D. 1403). He ascended the throne in 2201 (A. D. 1448), after the death of his brother. This prince, during the memorable siege of Constantinople, displayed ability, fortitude, and courage, not unworthy the heroes of ancient Rome. He was killed in the general assault on the city, in the year of Rome 2206 (A. D. 1453)].

The gold medallion described below is given by some writers; but it is not authenticated.

A bearded head, with the ancient diadem, to the right.—Rev. S. C. An eagle, with expanded wings.

3.

A bearded diademed head, to the right.—Rev. S. C. An eagle, on a thunderbolt.

4.

The bearded head of the Tiber, to the right, crowned with water weeds.—Rev. S. C. Romulus and Remus, suckled by the wolf.

Visconti has supposed this bearded head to be that of Romulus, but Mionnet observes that it is much more likely to be the head of the Tiber.

5.

IMP. III. An eagle with expanded wings, standing on a sceptre.—Rev.
COS. IIII. A winged thunderbolt.

6.

The diademed head of Juno (or of the younger Faustina?)—Rev. S. C.
A dove.

7.

The helmed head of Minerva, to the right.—Rev. S. C. An owl.

8.

The same head.—Rev. S. C. An olive branch.

9.

The same head.—Rev. S. C. A cornucopia.

10.

The same head.—Rev. S. C. A club.

11.

The same head.—Rev. S. C. within a laurel garland.

12.

The same head.—Rev. ROMA. across the field.

13.

A bearded helmed head, with coat of mail, to the right.—Rev. S. C. A coat of mail.

14.
A bearded, helmed head.—Rev. S. C. A trophy.
15.
A bearded, helmed head.—Rev. S.C. The Roman eagle, between two standards.
16.
The head of Mercury, with the petasus.—Rev. S. C. A caduceus.
17.
A petasus.—Rev. S. C. A caduceus.
18.
An infant bust, with a garland of ivy and vine leaves.—Rev. S. C. within a garland of ivy and vine leaves.
- This bust is thought by some, to be that of Annius Verus. There are several varieties of this coin. On some, the bust, has the chlamys.
19.
An infant head, veiled, and crowned with sea weeds.—Rev. S. C. within an olive garland.
20.
A griffin squatting, one foot resting on a wheel.—Rev. S. C. A tripod.
21.
A horse, with saddle and bridle, to the right.—Rev. A hammer.
22.
A rhinoceros, to the left.—Rev. S. C. An olive tree.
23.
A vexillum.—Rev. Mars, marching, with a trophy and a spear.
24.
A vexillum.—Rev. Minerva standing, an owl on her right hand, and a spear in her left.
25.
A diota.—Rev. The modius, holding three ears of corn.
26.
A galley.—Rev. D. in the middle of the field.
27.
TR. in monogram.—Rev. G. in the middle of the field.
28.
A sceptre, surmounted by a human head.—Rev. A. P. P. F, within an oak garland.
29.
Two horse shoes.—Rev. TRIVMP. An olive tree. In the field, IO. IO.

A P P E N D I X.

COMMODUS.

VICT. BRIT. P. M. TR. P. X. IMP. VII. COS. IIII. P. P. Victory, seated on a heap of bucklers, holding a buckler and a palm-branch.

This coin, engraved at page 323, is omitted in the text. It is not of very uncommon occurrence, but is much valued in this country, especially when fine.

PHILIPPUS THE ELDER.

IMP. M. IVL. PHILIPPVS. AVG. Radiated head of Philippus, regarding the right.—Rev. P. M. TR. P. IIII. COS. II. P. P. A woman, standing; a caduceus in her right hand, and a cornucopia in her left. - - - - - AR

This denarius, in Mr. Brumell's cabinet, appears to be of good silver: it weighs, though smaller than the usual silver of this emperor, four or five grains more than the usual denarii with the head regarding the left.

GALLIENUS.

The two following types, in third brass, are taken from the catalogue of the Berne collection:—

FELICI. AET. Felicity, leaning on a column, and holding a caduceus.

VIC. GAL. AVG. Victory, standing, holding a buckler resting on a cippus.

FLORIANUS.

VIRTVS. FLORIANI. AVG. Laureated bust of Florianus to the left, with javelin and buckler.—Rev. VIRTVS. AVG. The emperor, standing, holding the parazonium and a globe: a captive at his feet. AR

This coin, of pure silver, is in the collection of the Berne Museum. I have followed Mionnet, in asserting that there is no good silver of this period; but the coin in question is almost a proof to the contrary; besides, the very rare denarii of Julianus Tyrannus are of good silver. The quantity of good silver coined at this period may have been small; but it exceeds what may otherwise be considered mere trial pieces.

GALERIUS MAXIMIANUS.

The coin described at page 194, as having brought 8*l.* 8*s.* at the Trattle sale, had not the head of Mars, but the full-length figure of that deity, in the attitude of combat, with shield and spear: in the exergue, SIS. This coin, which was purchased by Mr. Brumell, is probably unique; as is perhaps that with the head of Mars, formerly in the cabinet of the French king.

MAXIMINUS DAZA.

IOVI. CONSERVATORI. AVG. Jupiter, seated on an eagle with expanded wings. In the exergue, PTR. - - - - - AR
SOLI. INVICTO. COMITI. The Sun, in a quadriga, full-faced. In the exergue, PTR.

Page 374, Vol. I. The gold medallions, Nos. 1 and 2, were bought at D'Ennery's sale, for the French cabinet. They cost together, in one lot, 501 francs. Mionnet's estimation is far below their real value.

The suite of quinarii, consisting of 218 gold, and 225 silver coins, brought, in one lot, at the sale of D'Ennery's cabinet, 2190 francs; but doubtless many of them were dubious; being in all probability casts from moulds, formed from the brass of the size of the quinarius; indeed, this has been proved in some instances.

Page 222. The silver of the younger Licinius is extremely base.

Page 253. Fine silver of Constantinus Junior, if any really exists, is of the first rarity.

Page 268. The silver of the large size, both of Constantinus II. and Constans, is much rarer than that of small size.

Vol. I. page 53. The Horatia was a spurious coin.

In the Catalogue d'Ennery are engraved two medallions, which are not noticed by Mionnet. Were they discovered to be spurious? They brought, in one lot, 220 francs. One was of Caracalla; the other, of Severus Alexander; and both were mounted in an ornamented border. The first bore the figure of Victory, seated on arms, and inscribing on a buckler: before, a trophy, to which are attached two captives: legend—P. M. TR. P. XX. COS. IIII. P. P.: in the exergue, VIC. PART. That of Alexander, bore the figure of Mars, marching, with spoils: legend—P. M. TR. P. VI. COS. II. P. P.
